Manpower Of All Forces Would Total 1,516,000

Army, Air Force To Retain Strength; Purchase of New Weapons Planned

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman's 1951 budget will carry 13.5 billion dollars for national defense and provide an Army, Navy and Air Force of 1,516,000 officers and men.

The total is about 1.2 billion under last year's budget.

Emphasis in equipment and readiness will be on air power. In its final form, The Washington Post learns, the budget includes a two-billion-dollar fund for procurement of planes for the Air Force and Navy.

In manpower, the Air Force will remain at its present size, the Army will stay at its cutback strength, while the Navy will shrink further.

For the first time since the end of the war, there will be fairly substantial funds for procurement of new weapons and equipment for the Army. Included is money for buying the new "sky sweeper" anti-aircraft guns and some new type tanks.

Money Breakdown

Moneywise, the distribution between the services will be something like this: Air Force, 4.4 billions; Army, 4 billions; Navy 3.9 billions; 500 millions for stockpiling and the remainder for Department of Defense separate agencies and joint or contingent items such as retired pay and public works.

One and a half million men will be in uniform next year, if the budget figures are approved by Congress. Here is the personnel picture under the budget, gained from reliable sources:

Air Force—An average of 416,000 officers and men will be maintained through fiscal 1951, compared with 412,500 this year. This actually is the same strength as now, for next year's figure includes some 3500 engineers, medicos, etc. now assigned to the USAF but carried on Army rolls.

Army to Have 640,000

Army—An average of 640,000 officers and men will be maintained through the year, compared with 677,000 authorized for this year before cutbacks were ordered.

Navy and Marine Corps—The Naval Service is expected to enter the year with 474,000 officers and men and end with 447,000. This compares with 527,000 officers and men appropriated for this year—later cut back to an unannounced strength. The Marine Corps will be maintained at the traditional 20

In Service Unification Row

Bogan Asks for Retirement Rather Than Take Lesser Post

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 3 (AP).—Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan, one of the Navy admirals involved in the row over armed services unification, today applied for retirement rather than accept a lesser command.

The commander of the United States First Task Fleet said he had learned through the press that orders were being issued transferring him to the Fleet Air Command at Jacksonville, Fla.

Bogan, a veteran Navy aviator, authored a letter that indirectly touched off the airing of the bitter unification dispute before a committee of Congress.

It was this letter—indorsed by Admirals A. W. Radford and Louis E. Denfeld—that Capt. Charles G. Crommelin copied and handed to news reporters in Washington in October.

Lodge Voices 'Grave Doubts' On Using Navy at Formosa

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Division appeared in Senate Republican ranks yesterday over the use of American armed force to keep Formosa from Communist control.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he had "grave doubts as to the advisability" of using the Navy, as proposed on Monday by former President Herbert Hoover and Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

"We would have a small military success and lose a great moral and propagandistic advantage," Lodge told reporters. "We undoubtedly will have to stop Communistic advances somewhere, but we must not put ourselves in the wrong to do it."

On the other side of the Capitol, Representative John Kee (D., W. Va.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said giving American armed protection to Formosa would "put us in the gravest danger of starting World War III."

Kee said he was "fearful of the Taft-Hoover idea, and argued that there were only two possible courses for the United States to follow.

One, he said, was to "leave the matter in abeyance." The other was to "walk in—and if we walk in, we have got to go in, not half heartedly, but with all our power, not just the Navy." And he expressed the belief that use of the Navy would lead ultimately to use of the Army.

Meanwhile, Senator William F.

Haiti Invokes Pact in Feud With Dominica

By The Associated Press

The government of Haiti yesterday invoked the Rio Mutual Defense Treaty against the Dominican Republic, charging complicity in an alleged conspiracy of assassination and arson.

The Haitian Embassy said the charges were presented in a note to the chairman of the Organization of American States.

The embassy said the note accused President Rafael Trujillo's Dominican government of "effective participation" in a plot on December 19 to kill the President and other high officials of Haiti and to set fire to Port au-Prince, the Haitian capital. The alleged plot was scotched.

Haiti and the Dominican Republic, lying side by side on an island in the Caribbean, have been involved frequently in border skirmishes for many years.

An official said the council will take up the Haitian note Friday.

The note charged that the conspirators planned to set fire to Port-au-Prince and then "under cover of general panic, former Col. Astrel Roland, stationed at Jimani in Dominican territory, was to cross the border at the head of an armored group and overthrow the Haitian government."

The Dominican Republic denied any such conspiracy.

Strike Averted By $5 Rise For Chain Butchers

A work stoppage by meat cutters in stores of three large chains was averted at the last minute last night when they accepted a $5-a-week raise offered by management.

The $5-across-the-board increase affects butchers in A. & P., Safeway and American stores. It raises journeymen meat cutters from $62.50 to 67.50 and apprentice meat cutters from $46.50 to $51.50.

More than 800 members of Local 555, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen (AFL), who met at Laborers' Union Hall, 525 New Jersey ave. nw., voted acceptance of the wage increase, which is retroactive to December 3.

Two other chains, Food Fair and Giant, settled their dispute last week with a $5 raise. Increased wages in the five chains will affect 1300 butchers.

Russians Allow Yugoslav Freight To Go Up Danube

Vienna, Jan. 3 (AP).—Russia has opened her iron curtain on the Danube and permitted Yugoslavia to send six bargeloads of freight to the American zone of Germany.

It was the first shipment through Austria on the Danube since the war.

American officials announced the arrival of the barges today but were unable to explain why Russia had permitted them.

Since a year ago last June Russia and her Cominform allies have clamped an economic boycott on Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. But the arrival of the barges appeared to open traffic with the west.

When the flotilla returns to Yugoslavia from Regensburg, its American zone destination, it will carry a load of Ruhr coal for Yugoslavia, it was reported.

Duck Loses Race Against Skier At 30 Miles an Hr.

Sun Valley, Idaho, Jan. 3 (AP).—In what may have been the first race of its kind, a mallard duck lost to a skier today.

Ski Instructor Bill Brohan came down the mountain just as the duck was preparing to land.

The duck went back to full throttle with Brohan in pursuit. An injured wing slowed the duck after going for some distance at about 30 miles an hour just a foot above the snow.

Brohan grabbed it out of the air and kept on going.

2 Children and Puppy Die of Asphyxiation

New York, Jan. 3. (U.P.).—Mrs. Catherine Andreyev, 27, sobbed to police today that once before she had found her little girl playing with the knobs on the gas stove and scolded her

Last night the mother visited a neighbor for two hours, leaving the little girl, 2½-year-old Patricia, and a 5-year-old son, Thomas, in the apartment.

Mrs. Andreyev returned to find the stove jets hissing, the apartment filled with gas, and her two children dead of asphyxiation. Beside them their puppy lay dead, too.

Would Double City's Size

Alexandria Will Try to Annex 7½-Square-Mile Fairfax Area

The City of Alexandria yesterday announced plans to annex a 7½-square-mile, $17,500,000 slice of Fairfax County west of the city's present borders.

The territory, 80 percent undeveloped, would more than double Alexandria's size.

City Councilman Albert A. Smoot, chairman of council's annexation committee, said the proposal has been approved by Council together with a $10,000 appropriation to pay for surveys and legal fees.

The involved court machinery for annexation, Smoot said, will begin in about a month.

The fact that the land is mostly undeveloped, he added, "will give the city an opportunity to grow and expand both from a residential standpoint and industrially."

The territory selected by the committee is bounded:

On the south by the headwaters of Hunting Creek at the lower tip of Alexandria, then west along Cameron Run to the Southern Railway tracks, and a mile-and-a-half west along the tracks, north from that point a mile-and-a-quarter to the Shirley Memorial hwy., thence north and northwest to the southern boundary of the Washington-Virginia Airport, then southeast along the Arlington County line to King st. and Quaker la., the present Alexandria city limits.

Smoot said Fairfax County records place the total assessed

U. S. Closes 2 Hungarian Consulates

The United States yesterday struck back at Hungary for mistreating American citizens by ordering the Hungarian consulates in New York and Cleveland closed by January 15.

The diplomatic rebuke resulted from the arrest in Hungary of Robert A. Vogeler, 38, of New York, an official of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., and Israel Jacobson, Rochester, N. Y., a Jewish Welfare Agency representative.

Jacobson was released last week after being held 10 days under harsh cross-examination. Vogeler has been held incommunicado since November 18 on "espionage" charges.

Possible Break Hinted

The State Department ordered the consulates shut down in a sharply worded note delivered here to Hungarian Minister Omre Horvath, and also handed to the Hungarian Foreign Office in Budapest by United States Minister Nathaniel P. Davis.

The department on December 20 forbade Americans to travel in Hungary henceforth and warned that "further measures" would be taken unless the Vogeler and Jacobson cases were settled satisfactorily.

The new note hinted the United States may break off diplomatic relations unless the situation is mended.

"As long as the rights and interests of the United States and its nationals continue to be so grossly violated in Hungary," the note said, "other relations between the United States and Hungary cannot fail to be seriously affected."

Bulgaria Already Warned

The New York and Cleveland consulates are the only ones Hungary maintains in this country. But the department authorized the Hungarian Legation here to continue performing consular duties.

This country has no consulates in Hungary. Thus the Communist puppet can retaliate only by closing the United States Legation in Budapest—a move tantamount to severing relations.

The department also has warned Bulgaria that relations may be broken unless that Moscow-dominated country stops heaping "false accusations" on U. S. Minister Donald R. Heath.

Senate GOP Backs Policy Draft Plan

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Senate Republicans agreed yesterday to the drafting of a statement of GOP "aims and purposes" for use in the 1950 battle for control of Congress.

Guy G. Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, had asked his party's leaders on Capitol Hill to appoint committees to draw up such a statement.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. of Massachusetts, Republican leader of the House, said Monday he would gladly appoint a nine-member committee to work with a similar Senate committee and also a committee appointed by Gabrielson, made up of members of the Republican National Committee.

Taft Not Enthusiastic

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, was not enthusiastic about Gabrielson's proposal. He declined to appoint a committee, but agreed to put the matter before a caucus of all Senate Republicans.

This took place yesterday afternoon in Room 335 of the Senate Office Building. At the outset, Senator John Bricker of Ohio tried to forestall immediate action. He moved to have the matter lay on the table for 90 days, arguing that this would allow time for an unfolding of the Democratic program and a fuller development of the Republican program.

Voted Down, 26 to 9

Bricker's motion was voted down, 26 to 9. The resolution finally adopted said:

"That the chairman of the minority conference name a committee of the conference to confer with a committee of the House on the formulation of a restatement of aims and purposes of the Republican members of Congress, supplementing the 1948 Republican platform for the approval of the Republican conference of Senate and House, and to confer with a committee of the Republican National Committee and other interested Republicans."

Senator Eugene Millikin of Colorado, chairman of the Minority Conference, who presided, told

To Forestall New Wage Demands

Extend Rent Control a Year, Truman Asks Housing Leaders

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday asked congressional housing leaders to extend rent controls another year and thus remove one of the reasons for a new round of wage demands by organized labor.

He also urged early action on legislation to provide more credit for homes for middle-income families.

The President gave his views during a 40-minute conference with Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) and Representative Brent Spence (D., Ky.), chairmen, respectively, of the Senate and House Banking Committees, and Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), chairman of a Senate Banking Subcommittee on housing.

Mr. Truman handed the lawmakers a three-page memorandum which said a survey of six typical cities showed rent increases of 13.8 to 41.3 percent were imposed after ceilings were lifted.

Asserting that expiration of controls on schedule, June 30, would mean "similar or larger increases," he said such a result would cut the purchasing power of more than 10 million families.

This, he added, "would have a depressing effect on employment and purchasing power, not only in industrial communities but in agricultural areas throughout the Nation."

While Sparkman has predicted Congress will refuse to renew rent ceilings, Mr. Truman said the "outlook is that rent control will still be necessary on a national scale after June, 1950."

First Important Measure

Senate to Resume Fight Today On Repeal of Oleo Tax and Fees

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The 64-year-old fight to repeal Federal taxes and license fees on oleomargarine will be resumed in the Senate today.

The first important measure planned this session for Senate consideration will be a Finance Committee bill that:

1. Repeals the tax of 10 cents a pound on yellow margarine—whether colored naturally or artificially.

2. Repeals a tax of one-quarter of a cent a pound on white margarine.

3. Repeals all license fees. At present margarine manufacturers are taxed $600 a year. Wholesalers who sell yellow margarine are taxed $480 a year; those who handle only white margarine are taxed $200 a year. Retailers handling yellow margarine are taxed $48 a year; those handling only white are taxed $6 a year.

4. Provides that public eating places must serve margarine in three-cornered patties to differentiate it from butter.

The bill is identical to one that passed the House last year.

Probably the first action will be to debate an amendment offered by Senators Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) and Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.).

This would abolish all taxes, but would prohibit the shipment of yellow margarine in interstate commerce. This would bar colored margarine from about half the States. It is similar to a law passed in the 1920s—still on the books—that also was sponsored by

Rain Halts Mercury At 60; Balmy Weather Today

Chilly rains halted the mercury's advance yesterday at 60 degrees at 2:20 p. m. and spoiled its chance of equalling an all-time record of 64 degrees recorded on January 3, 1874.

However, the weatherman reports, it'll have a "chance" today to equal an all-time high of 66 degrees reported January 4, 1874.

Balmy air and cloudy skies are still in prospect for today. If the rain holds off the mercury will be back up in the record-breaking figures, the weather bureau thinks.

Bill Hits Black Market In Adoption of Babies

Representative Bolton (R., Ohio) yesterday proposed a Federal law to block interstate operation of what she called the black market in sales of babies by their parents.

She introduced a bill which would declare it a Federal offense punishable by imprisonment for up to 5 years to transport a baby across a State Line in connection with "black market" operations in adoptions.

16,000 Miners Quit; Quickly Ordered Back

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Union signals got crossed yesterday when 16,000 United Mine Workers soft coal diggers stayed away from work in Illinois.

The wildcat walkout was called off just as quickly as union leaders could get the word from John L. Lewis, union president, but the strikers were ordered back to work as of Monday, instead of today.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Chairman J. Monroe Johnson of the Interstate Commerce Commission predicted last night that ICC will cut service on coal-burning passenger trains by 25 percent, probably effective next Sunday. The order may come through today, Johnson said.

Most of the UMW's 480,000 members returned to the pits yesterday to work a two-day holiday week. Since early December, the UMW miners have been working only Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week in mines which have refused to sign a new work contract with the union providing "improved" benefits. The 5- and 6-day work week is in effect in those few mines which have met the new agreement with its higher wage and larger welfare fund royalty.

Olds Appointed To New Water Resources Board

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday created a temporary Water Resources Policy Commission and named Leland Olds as a member of it.

Olds is the former Federal Power Commissioner whose reappointment to the FPC was rejected by the Senate at the last session. Critics called Olds a radical.

The commission is to study and make recommendations concerning water resources. Morris L. Cooke, Philadelphia engineer, was made chairman.

Maragon Posts $2000 Bond After Perjury Indictment

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

John Maragon, one-time White House intimate, was indicted yesterday by a Federal Grand Jury on four charges of perjury before a Senate Committee.

Later he posted $2000 as bond for arraignment on Friday, when a trial date will be set.

Key figure in the Senate's "five-percenter" investigation into the alleged sale of influence in Washington, Maragon was a former friend of both President Truman and his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

The indictment charged:

1. That Maragon falsely stated under oath to the committee that he did not have any bank account except an account in the Union Trust Co. of Washington.

2. That Maragon falsely swore that during the years 1945 to 1949 he did not negotiate any Government business and did not receive any money for negotiating Government business or for any work done by him in connection with the Government or for doing any business with the Government.

3. That he falsely swore that when he took employment with the State Department on a mission to Greece he was not in the employ of anybody else and had already

President's Message to Start Melee In Congress

Both Houses Fidget Through Opening Day; Legislative Program Shaping Up

Fight Over Tax Bill Looms

"ONE PACKAGE" tax bill, easing some taxes but boosting others, is proposed by Speaker Rayburn. Story on Page 2.

In Refurbished Chambers

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Eighty-first Congress yesterday fidgeted through a restrained opening of its second session, then sat back and waited for a presidential message to touch off a legislative melee today.

Under the glare of redecorated ceilings, temporarily subdued legislators listened to eulogies for the dead and prayers for the living, then solemnly swore in a House pair and Senate threesome of new members.

In the Senate the formalities were all over in 37 minutes but in the House the speeches droned on until 2:14 p. m., with a few cracks about the "movie house" glamor of the renovated chambers tossed in.

Truman Message Today

Just before noon, the congressional "Big Four" came back from the White House, but declined to divulge details of the State of the Union message they pored over for an hour with the President.

President Truman will personally deliver it to a congressional joint session at noon today. All the election-year bombast, held temporarily in leash, will break in its train.

Today's message, and three others to follow, on the budget, the economic outlook and a separate message on taxes will set the legislative pitch of the session and give Republicans something to shoot at.

Anticipating an unbalanced budget and a bid for more taxes GOP leaders already were hammering away on this theme.

GOP "Price Tag" Unit

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (Mass.), announced plans to create a special House GOP "price tag" committee to put a cost label on every spending bill, including the Administration bell ringers.

And Representative Daniel A. Reed (N. Y.), ranking Republican Ways and Means committeeman, made a House speech plugging for his new "tax relief" bill, cutting excises, increasing personal tax exemptions and placing a 50 percent ceiling on all income tax rates.

Woman Commits Suicide, Husband Fails in His Try

New York, Jan. 3 (NYHT).—A socially prominent Virginia woman committed suicide today by taking an overdose of sleeping tablets in her two-room hotel suite, police reported. Her husband attempted to take his own life in the same way because of despair at her death. He was taken to French Hospital, where he was in critical condition.

They were identified as Mr. and Mrs. John D. Prince, jr., of Silver Ridge Farm, Middlesex County, Va. Prince was the son of the late John Dyneley Prince, former United States Minister to Denmark and to Yugoslavia, and professor emeritus of East European languages at Columbia University.

Police found four notes. Two had been written by Mrs. Prince and two by her husband.

The first note written by Mrs. Prince was addressed "To Whom It May Concern" and explained that she was in constant, bitter pain. The second was addressed to her husband and bade him good-by.

One of Mr. Prince's notes was addressed to the hotel, and he said he was "sorry to be causing all this trouble." The other was addressed to Mrs. Landon K. Thorne of New York, who was later identified as a cousin of the family, and said, in part: "We have tried to make a go of it, but now that Bea (his wife) is gone, there is no point in my carrying on."

Rayburn Proposes '1-Package' Tax Bill

A "one-package" tax bill, easing taxes in some places where they hurt, but making up the lost revenue elsewhere, was proposed to the President yesterday by House Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Rayburn hit at "popgun" tax moves, such as the current GOP drive for separate repeal of wartime excises, at a Capitol press conference after a "Big Four" legislative huddle with Mr. Truman.

The Texan said he told the President the House Ways and Means Committee should review the whole Federal tax structure, taking plenty of time, "and when they get ready to report we will know what we will have."

May Send Special Message

He declined to disclose what the President will recommend in the way of tax revision, but said he may send Congress a special tax message after discussing the subject briefly in his State of the Union message today.

Across the Capitol, Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), another "Big Four" conferee, agreed with Rayburn that Congress shouldn't deal with tax legislation in "spearate bites" but should let the Ways and Means Committee deal with taxes "as a whole."

Lucas slapped again at proposals to tie an excise tax cut to the first revenue bill up in the Senate, repeal of levies on oleomargarine.

But Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), the man who next to Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) has chief say about tax legislation, declined to say—yet—what he thought should be done.

Confers With Doughton

George, who later conferred with Doughton, said he hoped to agree with the North Carolinian on a "program," but would not discuss it until he sees the President's tax and budget recommendations.

The Georgian agreed with Lucas that an excise tax rider should not be tied to the oleo bill, but said that did not necessarily bar separate handling of excise tax cuts.

He pointed out that a House-passed internal revenue bill, amended by his Finance Committee to provide more than 600 million dollars in excise tax cuts, is already on the Senate calendar.

Ask if the Senate Finance Committee would "have time" to handle a general tax revision measure in the present short session if the Ways and Means group holds "lengthy" hearings, George said:

"If they get their bill over here in 60 to 90 days, I would say we could pass it this session. That means they would have to get a bill to us by April. We have been making continuing tax studies and should be about through with the Social Security (expansion) bill by that time."

Snyder in Conference

Late in the day Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder discussed the tax question with both George and Doughton, but they said no decisions were reached.

Doughton said only that his committee will meet soon, possibly later this week, to arrange for tax hearings.

Rayburn told reporters that he, together with the other top Democratic leaders—Vice President Barkley, Lucas and House Democratic Leader John McCormack (Mass.) spent about an hour going over the State of the Union and budget messages with the President.

He said he couldn't discuss the message because the President "may make some changes in it."

Asked if the Democratic leaders recommended any changes, the Speaker said only: "We talked pretty freely."

He said he had first suggested the overall Ways and Means Committee study and revision of taxes to the President last year.

A reporter asked if the President would submit a balanced budget.

Blames GOP Tax Cut

"We are hoping that the budget will be balanced sometime," the Speaker replied. "We would not be in such bad shape now if the (Eightieth Republican) Congress hadn't repealed 4.4 billion dollars in taxes in 1948, our most prosperous year. That seriously disjointed us. A prudent man pays his debts when he has the money."

Asked if excise tax cuts would be included in the Ways and Means version, Rayburn said:

"There are probably a lot of places taxes are pinching and it won't hurt revenues a lot to reduce them, and there are other places we can probably make up the revenue without hurting the taxpayer a great deal."

Opposes "Popgun" Action

A reporter wanted to know if the House woud approve if the Senate returned the oleo bill to the House with an excise cut rider.

"Not with my advice," replied Rayburn.

Saying taxes shouldn't be a "popgun" affair, Rayburn added:

"You can't just lop off 700 million dollars in excise taxes without seems to me we should make up the revenue lost. The thing for the is take plenty of time and review the whole revenue structure like they did last year in drafting a social security bill."

Committee Assignments Reshuffled

The Senate Democratic leadership yesterday reshuffled committee assignments to strengthen its hold on the powerful Finance and Appropriations Committees and provide berths for two freshmen.

The new alignment of the Senate itself—54 Democrats and 42 Republicans—makes possible the shift in the two committees. It is now the same as it was at the beginning of the Eighty-first Congress. Republicans got a seat on the Rules Committee and one on Appropriations when Republican John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) replaced Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) in midsession.

Freshman Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D.-L., N. Y.) was named to the Labor and Public Welfare and to the Interior and Insular Affairs Committees. Senator William Benton (D., Conn.) was named to the Rules Committee and to the Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments.

Democratic Whip Francis J. Myers (Pa.) will take over the new seat on the 13-member Finance Committee. Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), who moved off the Appropriations Committee in the Dulles-Wagner shift, will get that seat back.

Other Democratic committee changes involved:

Senator Garrett L. Withers (Ky.), who resigned from the Labor Committee to take a post on the Judiciary Committee created by the death of former Senator Bert H. Miller (Idaho).

Senator Glen Taylor (Idaho), who left the Expenditures Committee to replace Miller on the Interior Committee.

Senator Edward L. Leahy (R. I.), who left the Interior Committee to join the Expenditures Committee.

Robertson leaves a seat on the Expenditures Committee to take the Appropriations post. Myer leaves the Rules Committee to take the Finance Committee post.

U. S. Business Assured Boost In GI Refunds

The Nation's merchants begin the new year with assurance of a notable "bolstering" factor in their business—the refunding of overpayments on GI insurance, soon to begin.

Federal economists, interviewed yesterday, were agreed that the refunds—a total of $2.8 billion, of which $2.5 or $2.6 billion will be made in the first six months—will lend considerable support to a prosperous economic trend.

But they cautioned against overestimating its effect. It will not be a colossal shot in the arm to busines by any means, they felt. They pointed out that the sum will be, for the first half-year, at most about a 2 percent increase in expected personal income.

40% Saving Indicated

Furthermore, they said, not all of it will be spent. Experience with the two-billion-dollar World War I veterans' bonus in 1936—a much larger sum relative to the national income then—and with the terminal leave bond cashing in 1947 indicates that about 40 percent of the total will be saved.

Part of the saving will be in the positive sense, in expanding bank deposits, life insurance, etc. The rest will be in a negative way, in paying off indebtedness.

This leaves 60 percent, or about 1.5 billion dollars to be spent. Most, it is expected, will go out in "chunk" purchases of durable goods—autos, television sets, home appliances and furniture.

Department, furniture and electrical speciality stores, accordingly, are expected to reap most of the benefits.

Would Be 2% Boost

If all of the $1.5 were spent in the first half of 1950, the addition would be at the rate of 2 percent of last year's retail sales.

But economists point out that some of the spending will be deferred until the second half of the year, and some of the money has already been "spent." That is, merchants have already reported some increase of buying on credit among veterans, in anticipation of paying off the debt when the insurance refund is made later on.

In various cities, dealers have been reported as already advertising "buy now—and pay when you get your insurance check."

11 Percent Rent Boost Asked at Naylor Gardens

Hearing on a request for an 11-percent rent increase for 448 apartments at Naylor Gardens will be held January 11 at 9:30 a. m. in the District Building Board Room.

A petition filed with the District Rent Control Administrator by Veterans Cooperative Housing Association asks that monthly rents on one-bedroom units be raised from $64.85 to $71.95, and on two-bedroom apartments from $76.30 to $84.65.

The 748-unit development, at 30th st. and Naylor rd., se., was built by the Government during the war, and sold to the asociation in 1948. Units for which increases were not asked are owned by association members.

An 8 percent increase on 540 rented apartments was granted in August, 1948.

opening, politics were mostly eschewed. Chaplains of the two Houses dedicated the new session to the high tasks ahead.

The Rev. James Shera Montgomery joined House members in the Lord's Prayer. Prayed the House chaplain: "May there be essential unity of high purpose throughout our land and the blessing of peace in all the earth."

The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris opened the Senate with this prayer:

"In an hour when such vast issues are at stake may those here called to high places of state, conscious of the great tradition in which they stand and the desperate times of which they are the servants, rise to greatness of vision and soul as the anxious eyes of all the earth are upon this capital. Maintain in us the fidelity of those to whom much hmas been given and from whom much will be required."

While his bride of a few weeks watched from the first row of the Senators' family gallery, the newlywed "Vep" swore in the Senate's three new members—Former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman (D., L., N. Y.) William Benton (D., Conn.) and Harry Darby (R., Kans.).

Two New House Members

With the former Mrs. Hadley were the Vice President's two married daughters, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur and Mrs. Max Truitt, and their husbands. Clark Clifford, the President's retiring "ghost writer," accompanied by his wife and mother, also looked on from the gallery. The Clifords were the first to introduce Barkley to his bride.

In the House, the oath-taking was as quickly dispensed with. There, Speaker Rayburn swore in two new Democratic members, Mrs. Edna P. Kelly (N. Y.) and John Shelley (Calif.).

Then the eulogies started and the galleries thinned.

Just before the Senate adjourned, Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) officially broke the news that the Senate will come back to work after listening to the President in the House. A bill repealed Federal oleo taxes, threatened with an excise tax repeal rider, will open the Senate slate.

But Speaker Rayburn told a press conference the House is scheduling no business for the remainder of this week. Rayburn will make his choice from bills already on the House calendar following a round of conferences with Democratic leaders.

Under questioning, Rayburn said he did not know when the fair employment practices bill reported by the House Labor Committee may be called up under the new House 21-day discharge rule.

Such a move is possible next Monday, but reports are that House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) may wait another two weeks before trying to force the House FEPC bill to a vote.

IN THE HOUSE—Representatives John Shelley (D., Calif.) and Edna F. Kelly (D., N. Y.) look over the House rules before yesterday's opening of Congress. Both won in special elections to replace Congressmen who died

The Senate Democratic leader will put the Senate to its first civil rights test on the FEPC issue in a few weeks but still declined to set a date.

As the Senate's Nos. 2 and 3 bills Lucas has scheduled the Sparkman "middle income" housing bill to follow oleo tax repeal, and the basing point "freight absorption" bill to follow that (on January 20.)

Revision to Be Sought

Some committee revision of the Sparkman bill to bring it more in line with the Administration's housing views may be attempted before it reaches a vote. The bill provides among other "moderate income" aids for direct loans to cooperatives. The Administration is said to favor guaranteed loans of the FHA type. Representative John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) made a trip to the White House late yesterday reportedly to discuss this and other possible changes.

House GOP Leader Martin announced his Republican "price tag" committee at a press conference attended by Representative John Taber (N. Y.), ranking GOP "axe man" on the House Appropriations Committee.

Martin said the GOP group will make public on the first of each month detailed reports on every new bill involving public outlays.

"Its studies will embrace all authorizations, all new programs, all new projects, as well as actual appropriation bills," the Repubilcan leader said. "Harmless-looking measures carrying 'sleeper' future costs will be exposed as they appear."

He said he hopes the new unit "scares the people" into demanding a stop to excessive Federal spending.

The Seats Still Are Hard

Returning legislators didn't appear a bit awed by their refurbished House and Senate chambers. Some were plainly unhappy about it.

"They have now elevated the chamber to the level of the average movie house," Representative James G. Fulton (R., Pa.) told the House.

"But why didn't they do something about the hard seats? Some of the members don't have the proper padding."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) told reporters the Senate looked "more like a cocktail lounge."

"As soon as we get something historical, or beginning to become antique, we destroy it," mourned Lodge.

Selective Service Vital To Nation, Hershey Claims

Director of Selective Service Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey last night warned that Selective Service might mean the difference between the survival and extinction of this country.

Speaking before Post 58, Jewish War Veterans, 3147 16th st. nw., General Hershey said that Selective Service would save from four to six months in the production of necessary manpower in case of war.

Extension of Selective Service, he said, would "assure our friends and warn our potential enemies."

Selective Service expires June 24, 1950, he said and extension would be "the cheapest insurance against war we can buy."

'Bunk,' Eastland Replies to Report He Plans to Quit

Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) described as "bunk" yesterday a report that he plans to resign soon from the Senate.

Mississippi State Senator C. A. Hillman said in Jackson, Miss., Monday night that he understood Eastland intended to quit soon and would be succeeded by Gov. Fielding Wright.

Wright said he had heard nothing of such a move.

Courtney Pact, Eastland's administrative assistant, said he had talked with Eastland by telephone yesterday and quoted the Senator as saying of the report:

"It's bunk. There is nothing to it."

Eastland is on his way here by car.

U.S. Handed $16 Million Bill For Indian Lands Taken in '55

Uncle Sam was ordered yesterday to square accounts with four Indian tribes in Oregon by paying $16,515,604.77 for land taken by the Government 95 years ago.

Of the amount, more than 14 million dollars represents interest at 5 percent from 1855 to 1934 and at 4½ percent since then.

The land in question, along the and including about half the State's sea frontage, once was a vast Douglas fir region. The award yesterday handed down in a unanimous ruling on the United States Court of Claims, set the land value at $1.20 an acre as of 1855.

The land belonged to four tribes: the Tillamooks, Coquille, Too-too-to-ney and Chetco. The Government now will have to work out the exact number of descendants of the 1855 tribes who will split up the big award.

Congress referred the case to the Claims Court in 1935. In 1945, the court ruled that some of the tribes involved in the litigation were not entitled to payment, but that the four were. The Government appealed to the Supreme Court, but lost a 5-to-3 decision in 1946. Yesterday's award was made at the Supreme Court's order.

Consumers Here To Be Questioned On Buying Habits

In the next three months, a few score families in metropolitan and suburban Washington will be given a quiz on their financial affairs that will make the forthcoming Census questions look simple indeed.

The interrogation will be part of the fifth annual survey of Consumer Finances, conducted for the Federal Reserve System. Throughout the Nation some 3500 to 4000 interviews will be made, in 12 major cities and 50-odd other areas. Considerably less than one-tenth of the total will be in and around the District.

The survey is conducted on a carefully plotted sampling basis. Questions concern the financial status of the consumer, his purchases of durable goods and houses, his future plans for such purchases and his attitudes on investment and savings.

All information is confidential, with the interviewer not even aware of the name of the person questioned.

Nationalists Claim 1,400,000 Guerillas

On Shanghai Trip

Skipper Says Consul Tried To Hinder

Hongkong, Jan. 3 (AP).—The skipper of the United States freighter Flying Arrow today accused the State Department of making a last-minute attempt to hinder his ship's departure for Shanghai.

Capt. Davis Jones of Chicago said United States Vice Consul Fred Hill boarded the ship this afternoon and met with the crew in his presence.

Hill said he had authority from the State Department to pay off the crew members should the ship clear for Shanghai if they had transportation and subsistence pay back to the United States.

The Flying Arrow's Isbrandtsen Line has been feuding with the State Department over the sailing of its ships to Communist ports through the Nationalist blockade. Now the State Department has warned that the Nationalists claim to have mined Shanghai's approaches.

Later, in an interview, Jones declared, "I have not and will not delay the ship's departure," now set for Thursday.

Jones said no crew member or officer had refused in any way to carry out his orders and he expected no delay in sailing.

As for Hill's visit, Jones observed: "In my opinion, the State Department is hinndering instead of assisting the ship on her trade route."

There was no comment from Hill.

Taipeh, Formosa, Jan. 3 (U.P.)—Premier Yen Hsi-shan said today that 1,400,000 Nationalist guerillas are actively fighting the Communists on the Chinese mainland, and authorities here hope soon to arm and recruit thousands more.

At the same time, Yen said, Nationalist forces are fighting some 20,000 Red guerillas on strategic Hainan Island—probable next major target of the Communist advance.

The Nationalist Air Force announced today it showered New Year's "presents" on the Luichow peninsula, opposite Hainan, and the southwestern provincial capital of Kunming in five raids over the holiday weekend.

The communique claimed 700 Communists were killed and 90 ships sunk by the New Year's attacks.

Yen said the Communists apparently are massing for an attack on Hainan, but did not indicate how soon the onslaught was expected.

Britain Reinforcing Fleet in Far East

Hongkong, Jan. 3 (U.P.)—Britain's naval strength in the Far East soon will be increased by a modern cruiser mounting nine 6-inch guns and a destroyer, the Royal Navy announced today.

The announcement said that the cruiser Kenya and the destroyer Cockade were expected soon to reinforce the two cruisers and a frigate now in Hongkong.

The Kenya, one of the most modern cruisers in the fleet, is carrying Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin to Colombo, Ceylon, for the conference of Commonwealth Foreign Ministers. It will proceed here after touching at Colombo on January 7 or 8.

Black Defends Loan Terms of World Bank

International Bank loan terms, providing for inspection of a borrower's accounts and operations, will not be waived for anyone, Bank President Eugene R. Black declared yesterday.

It was these terms that were rejected as "too onerous" by Lord Trefgarne, chairman of the British Colonial Development Corp., in explaining why he terminated negotiations for a five-million-dollar World Bank loan.

Commenting at a press conference yesterday on Trefgarne's remarks, Black said he considered the terms reasonable and pointed out that they had been standard in all previous loans. He said he could not recall that the British representative on the bank's directing board ever objected to them in loans to other countries.

The terms at issue give the bank the right to examine and audit the borrower's books, to look into his financial condition, to see what goods are being bought with the loan proceeds and in general to be kept advised of actual operations.

To fulfill them, Trefgarne told reporters in London over the weekend, would have made the British development agency "paper-happy", with too many forms to fill out.

The projected loan, seen as only the first in a series to help the British develop backward colonial areas, was to have gone for the purchase of heavy American tractors and earth-moving machinery.

"I think it is perfectly reasonable," Black said, "to request that when we lend money to buy machinery, we get to see what they are going to do with it."

Black indicated that the door was always open to the CDC if it wanted to come back and accept the loan terms.

Trefgarne said he would try to obtain the necessary financing through commercial banking institutions.

'Outs' Leading in Egypt Vote; 4 Killed in Election Fighting

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 3 (AP).—Newspaper dispatches tonight reported four election day killings outside Cairo as early official returns put the Wafdists far ahead of all the opposition.

The Wafdists have been the "outs" in Egypt's turbulent postwar politics. Their chief opposition is the Saadist Party.

Six persons were killed during the general election campaign prior to today. Advices received by Cairo newspapers on today's violence said two were killed in fights between Wafdists and Saadists at Edkou near Alexandria, one at Bilbeis in northeastern Egypt and one at Benisuef south of Cairo. Several were reported wounded.

The first four results announced by the Ministry of Interior were all victories for the Wafdist Party, which is accused by its Saadist opponents of being pro-British. Three of the victories were in Cairo and one in Ismailia.

Saadists were the majority or government party in the present Chamber of Deputies.

Voting was heavy. Most of the conditions of martial law, instituted more than a year and a half ago when Egyptian troops entered Palestine, prevailed.

(Observers abroad had speculated that the election would show a trend against the Saadist majority in the present Chamber of Deputies because of the shock to national pride at Egypt's defeat in Palestine. Some observers expected, too, that the returns might reflect feeling among the five million voters concerning recent reports that King Farouk wants to marry the 16-year-old fiancee of an Egyptian diplomat. So far Egyptian censorship has permitted no mention of the reported romance.)

On the basis of unofficial returns, the Wafdists had swept at least 19 of Cairo's 31 seats, and Egyptian political correspondents predicted a Wafdist victory.

Yassin Serag el Din, manager of the Wafdist newspaper Sawt el Umma, led his nearest opponent by 3035 votes and became the first opposed candidate to win a parliamentary seat, the Ministry of Interior announced.

French Accuse Brazil Socialite In Wife's Death

Bayonne, France, Jan. 3 (AP).—Joao da Silvo Ramos, 25, socialite son of an honorary Brazilian diplomat, was charged today with the murder of his 20-year-old French wife, who died in Biarritz last October.

The French press has quoted Da Silva as saying his wife, daughter of a wealthy French businessman, died from an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Police said two autopsies on the body of Mme. Da. Silva showed no trace of poison. The first medical examination was made immediately after her death. The second was ordered two months later by the examining magistrate, who said he had learned of "new facts" in the case. The nature of the "new facts" has not been disclosed.

Armed Forces to Hold Caribbean War Games

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Armed Forces will send a vast assault force into the Caribbean shortly to get experience in seizing an overseas base for strategic air operations.

Headquarters for the maneuver discovered today that 80,000 men will make up the assault force and the defense force which will try to repel it.

Wage Demand Is Threat to Finn Regime

Helsinki, Finland, Jan. 3 (AP).—A trade union federation demand for a 10 percent general wage increase tonight threatened the government, already under pressure as a result of Russia's protest of treaty violation.

The fate of Premier K. A. Fagerholm's Social Democratic government may be at stake at a special session of Parliament called for January 10 to consider the issue of a general wage increase. This comes just before presidential elections February 15.

President Juho Paasikivi, 78, is a candidate for reelection. The Communists are using Russia's protest as a trump card in their campaign against him.

Fagerholm is expected to support the demand of the trade unionits for the general wage increase. He is under strong pressure from trade union members of his party to do so.

But rightist parties, of which the Agrarians are the strongest, oppose the wage increase. These parties demanded that Fagerholm call an extra session of Parliament to consider the wage boost. He refused.

The leaders of the rightist parties then exercised their privilege to call on the speaker of Parliament, Dr. Urho Kekkonen, to call Parliament into special session. Kekkonen, the presidential candidate of the Agrarians, reportedly will call Parliament for January 10.

If Fagerholm's cabinet should fall a caretaker cabinet would be appointed until March 1 when a new government will be set up after the presidential election.

The Soviet note accused Finland of protecting more than 300 Russian war criminals in violation of the peace treaty between the two nations.

A foreign office spokesman said tonight the office is working on a reply to the Soviet note. He said any reports that Finland had rejected the note were entirely unfounded.

Ward Party Arrives In U.S. from Mukden

San Francisco, Jan. 3. (U.P.).—U.S. Consul-General Angus Ward and 13 members of his former Mukden, Manchuria, consular staff, arrived here at 5 p. m. (EST) today aboard the S. S. President Wilson.

The diplomat and his consular family became the center of worldwide attention when they were held under armed guard by the Chinese Communists for 13 months. Ward and his four aides were convicted on trumped-up charges of beating a Chinese consul employe and eventually ordered deported from China by the Reds.

Atheism Is Still Threatened By Religion, Russians Told

Moscow, Jan. 3 (AP).—A Soviet science journal, launching a campaign to further atheism, said today that many Soviet people, including youths, continue to believe in God and are regular churchgoers.

The Journal of Science and Life, organ of the All Union Society for the Dissemination of Scientific Knowledge, called on the society to carry on systematic and ceaseless propaganda against religion.

An article by F. N. Oleshchuk said the struggle against religious prejudices is one of the forms of the struggle for communism.

At the same time, Oleshchuk declared, antireligious propaganda must depend solely on remaking the consciousness of the masses by conviction and not by compulsion through administrative measures, which he said would be "harmful."

Oleshchuk's article said it was a big mistake to consider that all was up with religion in Russia. He said no few people continue to believe in God and hold religious beliefs and superstitions.

He declared that some Soviet people, trying to justify religion here, are slipping from the true Marxist and Leninist doctrines. Some justify their attitude, he continued, by saying the Soviet government was changing its attitude toward religion.

Such ideas, Oleshchuk said, have nothing in common with communism. Religion remains an antiscientific, reactionary ideology and a hindrance on the path to communism.

Lodge Voices 'Grave Doubts' On Using Navy at Formosa

Knowland (R., Calif.) and other Republicans in both Houses kept up their demands for more forceful Administration action over Formosa.

Knowland said he had asked the State Department for a copy of a confidential document telling American officials abroad that they should be prepared to see Formosa fall to the Communists.

Was "Guidance Message"

The document apparently was a guidance message sent to American information officers in foreign posts on December 23. The State Department sends such guidance messages periodically for the use of its information officers in explaining American policy to newspaper editors and others abroad.

The December 23 guidance, like others dealing with the Far East, was sent for information to Tokyo, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, where the United Press obtained a copy.

As reported from Tokyo, the document said American criticism of American policy over Formosa has come "largely because of a mistaken popular conception of its strategic importance to the United States defense in the Pacific."

"The loss of the island is widely anticipated," the reported guidance said, "and the manner in which civil and military conditions there have deteriorated under the Nationalists adds weight to the expectation."

"Counter False Impressions"

The document went on to say, according to the report, that all available material should be used "to counter false impressions" that the retention of Formosa would save the Chinese Nationalist government, or that its loss would seriously damage American interests.

If these were its contents—and the State Department did not confirm them yesterday—the guidance of December 23 was a faithful report of the State Department's attitude as reported at the time.

Officials then thought, and still think, that Formosa was likely to fall to the Communists because of its internal decay rather than because of any external attack from the Communist mainland. The chief change in the meantime is that the Administration is considering how, short of using armed force, the United States might help the Nationalists hold the island.

Senator Knowland said yesterday that Undersecretary James E. Webb was "reserving judgment" on giving him the guidance message, since it was a "classified" document. The Senator said he had a right to it as a member of the Armed Services Committee.

Formal Request for Aid

Knowland also brought the belated acknowledgment by the State Department that the Chinese Nationalist government had formally asked help for Formosa on December 23.

Last week Michael J. McDermott, the State Department's press officer, announced the request for help, but said it had been an informal one. Yesterday the department said Ambassador Wellington Koo had made the request in a formal memorandum asking for military support, for the unfreezing of almost 100 million dollars formerly earmarked for China, and for the sending of American military, political and economic advisers.

[The Associated Press reported from Taipeh, the Formosan capital, that informed sources there were confident of American aid if the Nationalists could hold out another six to eight weeks.

[The dispatch said the new Formosa governor, K. C. Wu, had scored some successes in solving political and economic problems, but still faced problems of smuggling by the Nationalist navy and corruption among Nationalist army units there.]

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said yesterday that the United States should cut its economic aid to Britain if, as expected, the British government recognized the Communist regime in China. "We are either in a cold war against a common enemy, world communism, or we are not," Judd declared.

Red General Again Refuses to Talk Of Jap Prisoners

Tokyo (Wednesday), Jan. 4 (AP). Russia's member of the Allied Council for Japan walked out again today as the United States charged thousands of missing Japanese prisoners of war still are in Soviet hands or dead.

Lieut. Gen. K. N. Derevyanko stalked out of this morning's special session of the four-power group, refusing for the second time in two weeks to discuss Russia's failure to complete repatriation of prisoners taken in World War II.

William J. Sebald, United States member, read a note from Secretary of State Dean Acheson to the Russian Ambassador in Washington, saying the American Government believes thousands of Japanese prisoners are still being held or have died in Russian camps. It asked for Moscow's agreement to an impartial investigation.

French Make Payments To Export Bank, Canada

The French government turned over $25,037,166 yesterday to the Export-Import Bank as payment of interest and principal on two American loans.

At the same time the French paid out $11,325,198 to the Canadian government as the latest installment on a loan extended by the Canadian government.

The payment to the Export-Import Bank was on a total of 650 million dollars extended to the French government in 1946, granted in connection with French settlement of its lend-lease account and surplus property purchases.

British Gold Reserve Gains $100 Million

By McCloy

Let Germans Vote Freely, Russia Dared

Berlin, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—American High Commissioner John J. McCloy challenged Russia today to permit honest elections in its occupation zone if it really wants to unify Germany.

But McCloy made it plain he does not believe Russia will consent to any honest elections in 1950.

He suggested two ways of unifying Germany.

1. East Germany could join itself with the western zones, under the West German Federal Republic. Russia has rejected any idea of this solution.

2. Russia could agree to hold free elections in all Germany and thus prepare the way for a unified all-German government.

London, Jan. 3. (AP).—Britain has reversed the ruinous drain on her gold and dollar reserves since devaluation of the pound, an informed source said today

The reserve fund which had fallen to $1,404,000,000 on Sept. 30, 12 days after devaluation, has jumped nearly $100,000,000 to $1,500,000,000, the informant said.

The news, which is expected to be announced officially Wednesday by Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, increased the likelihood of an early general election.

Prime Minister Attlee could now call an election and point to the figures as proof that the economic situation is better and that Britain is over the hump.

If he delays, the recovery trend might be reversed. Already the cost of living is on the rise and is likely to go still higher as the result of the increased cost of importing food from dollar countries.

Attlee's five-year term is up at the end of July, and he must call a general election before then.

College Rejects Discriminatory Gift of $140,000

New York, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Trustees of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., voted today to reject a bequest of nearly $140,000 from the estate of the late Frederick F. Dumont because of a clause in the will which discriminated against Jews and Catholics.

Dumont, a former consular official, specified that, if the funds were used for scholarships, such grants were not to be given to Jews or Catholics.

Ralph Cooper Hutchinson, president of Lafayette, said after the meeting of the trustees here today that the board declined the offer "as containing intimations of discrimination which are contrary to the history, practice and ideals of Lafayette College."

CAB Reappointments Made

President Truman yesterday again designated Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board and Oswald Ryan as vice chairman. The appointments are for one year.

5 Terminal Co. Workers Granted Trial on Layoff

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday directed District Court to bring to trial a suit brought for back pay and job reinstatement by five furloughed women employes of the Washington Terminal Co.

The suit was on behalf of the women, all locomotive cleaners, who were placed on an indefinite furloughed in 1947. They claimed this was in violation of the union contract with the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, Helpers, Roundhouse and Railway Shop Laborers.

Gen. Meyer's Appeal Will be Heard Today

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 3 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals will hear tomorrow the appeal of former Air Force Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers. He is appealing from a decision of the United States District Court of Eastern Virginia denying his release from prison on a writ of habeas corpus.

Maragon Posts $2000 Bond After Perjury Indictment

discontinued his employment with Albert Verley & Co. of Chicago.

4. That he also perjured himself when he swore that about three months before July 28, 1949, he borrowed $5000 from his mother-in-law.

The four counts revolved around testimony Maragon gave before the Senate Subcommittee on Investigations of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. The investigating Senators heard Maragon, an immigrant from Greece at 15, former shoe-shine boy, bellhop and water boy, give conflicting testimony at a closed-door and later an open-door session.

Should a trial jury convict the talkative Maragon, a familiar figure in the congressional lobbies, he could receive a possible maximum penalty of 40 years. Punishment for perjury as a Federal offense is two to 10 years on each count but a maximum penalty is rarely, if ever, imposed.

The discrepancies in Maragon's closed-door and open-door testimony caused the committee to refer his testimony to District Attorney George Morris Fay for action.

11 Witnesses Before Jury

The grand jury heard 11 witnesses on December 20, some of whom repeated testimony they gave the committee—that Maragon did represent firms on Government deals and got paid for it.

The subcommittee heard General Vaughan testify that Maragon had been his friend and came and went at the White House. He also said that Maragon never had acted for him in any business with the Government.

Chairman Clyde Hoey (D., N.C.) of the investigating subcommittee said he was sure the Maragon indictment was warranted by "the facts developed at our investigation."

Another committee member, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, jr., (R., Wisc.) termed Maragon "only one of the smaller fish" and added:

"I sincerely hope Maragon's indictment is only the start and that the Justice Department will take full advantage of the information which our committee turned up and will do a thorough cleaning up job."

Bank Account in Texas

In connection with count one of the indictment the committee had evidence that Maragon had a bank account in San Antonio, Tex., in 1945, as well as in Washington. Carmine S. Bellino, accountant for the investigators, testified Maragon banked around $120,000 during the five years in which Maragon said his income was about $30,000.

JOHN MARAGON,
. . . accused of perjury

Two witnesses testified they paid Maragon in 1946 for an unsuccessful attempt to get the Agriculture Department to lift an order suspending a sugar quota of a New Jersey molasses firm.

On the third count, the one concerning the mission to Greece, the committee had evidence that the Albert Verley Perfume Co. of Chicago was paying Maragon $1000 a month while Maragon was an employe, from November, 1945, to March, 1946, of the American mission observing the Greek elections.

On the fourth count, concerning the "loan" of $5000 from his mother-in-law, the committee said there was evidence that Maragon merely gave his mother-in-law, Mrs. Hattie E. Johnson of Salisbury, Md., the money in the first place and she handed it back. Investigators said the $5000 was used to finance a new home for Maragon, who lives in McLean, Va.

Moslem Attack Is Reported In Indonesia

Jakarta, Indonesia, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Moslem extremists and Indonesian Republican forces were reported tonight to be fighting a pitched battle in one section of central Java.

Reliable sources said the engagement, the first outbreak of violence since the sovereignty of the new United States of Indonesia was proclaimed last week, centered in the area of Brebes, a small coastal town 150 miles east of Jakarta.

About 1000 fanatical Darul Moslems were reported to have entered Brebes and occupied the town's public buildings but were forced to withdraw after heavy night fighting.

The fighting was said to have been resumed today and communications into Brebes severed.

Mt. Rainier Cuts $27,000 From Debt

Mayor Herbert Reichelt of Mount Rainier, Md., told the Town Council last night that $27,000 of its bonded indebtedness of $33,000 for street and road improvements has been paid off in the last six months.

The balance will be due in installments of $2000 and $4000 this year, he added.

The town council, at its meeting in the Municipal Building, warned the Bluebird Cab Company against violation of parking regulations by occupying meter spaces overtime as cab stands.

Samuel Del Vecchio, president of Peoples Hardware Company, was given a certificate as honorary traffic director of Mount Rainier.

percent of Navy strength—approximately 75,000.

This would mean the Nation will begin the year with 1,530,000 in uniform and end with 1,503,000—an average of about 1,516,000. Last year's budget provided for 1,614,000 officers and men.

Officials say this will provide an Air Force of 48 groups, an Army of 10 divisions and an operating Fleet built around six large aircraft carriers and one battleship.

Fewer Men in "Pipelines"

There will be more effective use of available manpower, it is said, with fewer men in "pipeline" and assigned to overhead, and more in combat units.

The aircraft procurement program will be at close to the same level as this year's "adjusted" program—which is 1.3 billions for the Air Force and about 625 millions for Naval aviation.

The sum will not buy as many planes as this year, however, as the aircraft will cost more. They will run larger and prices will be higher.

Only a lump sum will be provided for construction of bases, posts and airfields. Except for some projects at bases already underway, the budget will not set forth individual public works items. Construction already authorized will be restudied for priority in the light of new authorization now before Congress and additional projects to be proposed later in the session.

Figures given are in terms of "new obligational authority"—that is including both new cash and contractual authority but not cash to pay off last year's contract authorizations.

Mercy Killer Doctor Indicted For Murder

Manchester N. H. Jan. 3 (U.P.)—A grand jury today indicted Dr. Hermann N. Sander on a first degree murder charge in the "mercy death" of a woman cancer patient.

He will be arraigned in Superior Court Thursday. There was no indication of when the case will come to trial.

Conviction on a charge of first degree murder carries an automatic sentence of life imprisonment in New Hampshire unless the jury recommends hanging. However the presiding judge can give the jury an opportunity to act on a lesser charge such as second degree murder or manslaughter.

Dr. Sander accused of killing a patient by injecting air into her veins learned of the indictment at his office. He had nothing to say about the action.

Neither Sander nor any member of his family was present as the jury filed into the hushed courtroom and delivered the indictments to Superior Court Judge Harold E. Wescott.

Sander was charged in the death of Mrs. Addie C. Borroto, 59, on December 4 at the county hospital.

The case was presented to the jury by County Solicitor William H. Craig, who also was believed to have been a witness along with Attorney General William L. Phinney.

The indictment charges that Sander "feloniously, willfully and and of his malice aforethought did inject 10 cubic centimeters of air four times in close succession in the veins of one Abbie Borroto with the intent . . . to kill and murder her."

Sander is free on $25,000 bail and Phinney said he would remain so until at least Thursday when he is arraigned in Superior Court on the murder charge. At that time the question of bail will be argued again.

Mrs. Hiss Denies Typing Documents

In Alexandria

Wallet Said To Contain $2200 Rifled

An Alexandria restaurant operator yesterday reported the theft of $2200 from a wallet he left in a filing cabinet in his establishment.

The proprietor, Elias A. Fraggoulis, who operates the Colony Restaurant, 1632 King st., learned of the loss at 7 a.m. yesterday when he arrived to open his place and found police waiting.

Police said a routine check at 12:45 a.m. yesterday disclosed a rear window had been forced open. They said they crawled through it and, near the cash register, found an empty brown leather wallet on the floor. Nearby was an open cash box and the filing cabinet.

Unable to reach Fraggoulis then, they awaited his arrival yesterday morning.

Police said they informed the proprietor of what they had found and he told them the wallet had contained $2200. He said he customarily left the wallet overnight in the cabinet, which was not locked, according to police.

New York, Jan. 3 (NYHT).—Mrs. Priscilla Hiss, wife of Alger Hiss, testified today that she did not type the copies and excerpts of Government documents which Whittaker Chambers accused her of typing.

Mrs. Hiss completed her direct examination at her husband's second perjury trial, repeating in more detail the denials she gave at the first trial last June.

She said today she had never actually seen the documents in question before, nor held them in her hand; that she had never had any such pieces of paper in her house, had never typed any Government documents at all and never had said in the hearing of Chambers or in any other circumstances that she would type Government documents.

She said her husband often brought documents home from work in his brief case, but she never knew what they were.

Contradicts Chambers' Story

All day Mrs. Hiss repeated substantially the same testimony she gave in the first trial, corroborating her husband's story and contradicting that of Chambers. Hiss is under an indictment alleging he committed perjury when he denied having given secret Government documents and copies and extracts of such documents to Chambers in the first three months of 1938 for the use of a Communist spy ring.

United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy produced one surprise on cross-examination late in the afternoon, when he asked Mrs. Hiss if she smoked.

"You mean do I smoke cigarettes?" Mrs. Hiss replied.

"Did you ever smoke a pipe?" Murphy asked. A slight titter spread through the courtroom. Mrs. Hiss was silent for a moment, then said: "I smoke cigarettes."

Murphy repeated his question about pipe-smoking. Mrs. Hiss said "I don't think so."

Murphy asked her to think back carefully and try to recall if she did not smoke a pipe when she worked for Time, Inc., in 1927.

"I certainly didn't," Mrs. Hiss said.

Registered as Socialist

Mrs. Hiss stated, as she had done at the first trial, that she was never a member of the Socialist Party although she registered as a Socialist in 1932. She said that when she registered as a Socialist she thought she was merely indicating that she intended to vote for Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate for President, in the 1932 election.

Mrs. Hiss said that in the fall of 1932 she made small contributions to the upper Broadway section of the Socialist Party and helped distribute coffee and sandwiches to "numberless unemployed" at Socialist meetings in the neighborhood of the Union Theological Seminary.

The appearance in the spectators' seats of Ramos C. Feehan, Government documents expert who has already testified, gave rise to speculation that the defense may be planning to call its own documents expert, and Feehan might be waiting to hear ths testimony and advise the Government how to rebut it. Feehan would not say why he was present.

Statement Uncontested

The defense has not contested Feehan's statement that the typed papers in the case were typed on a Woodstock machine once owned by Hiss. The defense has sought to show that the typewriter passed out of Hiss' possession before the documents were typed, and has argued that Chambers or a confederate may have done the typing.

No evidence has yet been produced to support this theory.

Johnson Sees Police Change-Over

The Washington Post

UNIFICATION—Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson looks at old arm bands at the activation yesterday of the new Armed Service Police Detachment. Left to right, Capt. J. F. Austin, Army; Lieut. Comdr. M. J. McIntire, Navy; Johnson, and Capt. H. M. Rutledge, Air Force

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday attended ceremonies marking activation of the new unified Armed Service Police Detachment of the Washington area at the Naval Gun Factory.

"This exemplification of unification," Johnson said, "will result in economies and increased efficiency. That," he said "is music to my ears."

The new unit, which Johnson said "will be prepared for any 4 o'clock in the morning necessary," will replace separate service police and consist of 32 enlisted men, 2 officers and 1 enlisted woman from each service. It will be based at the Navy Yard and operate in a 10-mile radius of Washington.

The ASPD members will wear their own service uniforms but all will be equipped with standard white leggings and white belts. Command of the unit will rotate among the services, with Lieut. Comdr. Max J. McIntire, director of discipline for the Potomac River Naval Command, as initial commander.

Top-ranking armed forces officials accompanied Johnson as members of the official reviewing party.

School Construction Loan Again Sought in Montgomery

The Montgomery County Council yesterday resubmitted its request to the State of Maryland for grants and loans totaling $1,863,500 for school construction.

The request duplicated one submitted September 13 under provision of a State act later ruled invalid by the Maryland Court of Appeals because of a procedural error in the recording of the act by the General Assembly last spring.

A new act was passed by the legislative body in special session in December to remedy this defect.

A. Morton Thomas, county director of inspection and licenses, told the council notices have been sent to 69 violators of the county trailer camp law directing them to remove trailers by March 1.

In cases where two or more trailers are parked at one location, property owners were told they could obtain trailer park licenses before February 1.

The law prohibits trailers from being parked more than three days except in licensed trailer parks. Violations are punishable by fines up to $500 or 90 days in jail or both. Passed in 1948, the law has not been enforced, Thomas said.

A request by J. Newton Brewer to withdraw his application for apartment zoning of 69 acres at Rockville pike and Grosvenor lane, Bethesda, was granted informally. He was asked to withdraw it again at a scheduled hearing on the application tonight at the Bethesda County building.

Brewer's request was made, he said, after learning that the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission had recommended deferral of action on the application until completion of its master zoning plan for Bethesda.

McGrath Calls Law Enforcement Conference Here

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath yesterday called a conference of State and city law enforcement officials to "discuss what should and can be done to strengthen further our powers in the field of crime detection and enforcement."

McGrath asked the National Association of Attorneys General, the United States Conference of Mayors, and the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers to send five representatives each to the U. S. Attorneys' Conference here February 16-18.

In letters to the groups, McGrath said "calculating criminals have from time to tome found loopholes enabling them to evade the law with impunity" because of jurisdictional limitations.

Indictment Says Man Stole Girl's $385 Bull Fiddle

George Grant, 31, took his girl friend's bass fiddle and bowed out, a District Court indictment charged yesterday.

The girl, Ruth Williams, 480 M st. sw., told police Grant removed the instrument from her home after remarking that he needed to hear the musical sounds of coins clinking in his pocket.

The fiddle cost $385 and there were still installment strings attached, her statement said. All this was alleged to have happened last November 28. Grant was indicted on a charge of grand larceny. The fiddle is still missing.

Bill Introduced For Painter's Memorial

Representative Frances Bolton (R., Ohio) yesterday introduced a bill to place a modest memorial over the grave of the painter, Constantine Brumidi, who spent 25 years decorating the interior of the Capitol.

Gubitchev's Plea to Subpena Acheson As Witness Is Denied

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—The defense in the Coplon-Gubitchev spy conspiracy case tried and failed today to subpena Secretary of State Dean Acheson as a witness.

The attempt came after Acheson informed the United States District Court here that the diplomatic visa of Soviet Engineer Valentin A. Gubitchev was valid for only one year after his arrival in the United States in 1946.

In a pretrial hearing before Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan, Gubitchev is claiming that he is immune from arrest or trial as the holder of a diplomatic passport and visa.

Gubitchev, a Russian engineer now suspended from his United Nations post, and Judith Coplon, former Department of Justice employe, are accused of conspiring to steal secret Government papers for the Russians.

Acheson said in his letter that Gubitchev was granted a diplomatic visa because he was at that time third secretary of the Soviet delegation to the United Nations. The visa was valid for only one year and Gubitchev did not ask an extension, Acheson said, adding:

"Mr. Gubitchev has never been accepted by the Department of State as a diplomatic representative of the Soviet government."

Gubitchev's lawyer, Abraham Pomerantz, told Judge Ryan "each and every statement in that letter is false and irresponsible."

Ryan denied the request to call Acheson as a witness and also refused to strike the letter from the official record of the hearing.

Earlier, the Government turned over to the court six sealed packages of recordings made from Miss Coplon's wire-tapped telephone conversations.

Archibald Palmer, her lawyer, is trying to get the case against her thrown out on the ground that it rests on wire-tap evidence alone.

Baby Sitter Waits Three Nights for Missing Mother

Steubenville, Ohio, Jan. 3 (AP).—Josephine Cereone, 19, takes some sort of a prize for baby sitting. Hired Friday night, the Follansbee, W. Va., girl sat with Billy Pratt, 1, until last night.

Then when Mrs. Wanda Pratt, 17, still did not return Josephine called the sheriff's office.

Yes, Pres. Truman, Secy. Sawyer and Congressmen—

SKYWAY LUGGAGE IS STILL AT IT!

On January 3, 1949, we urged the First Session of the 81st Congress in a similar public message to DO SOMETHING about the oppressive, unfair and discriminatory so-called "luxury" tax. We urged action in the name of justice and the forgotten minority of small American business men. The First Session of the 81st Congress did nothing.

To the Second Session of the 81st Congress we say . . .

REMOVE IT NOW, EFFECTIVE NOW!

On December 16, President Truman declared that this tax must be removed. On December 28, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer asserted that the tax "has a depressing effect on retail sales, and in some cases, this effect is very serious." Congressmen throughout the nation have publicly indicated that they favor removal of the tax by the Second Session of the 81st Congress.

REMOVE IT NOW, EFFECTIVE NOW!

Because the public has been officially and repeatedly told that the tax is coming off, the flow of business has dried to a trickle in the industries blighted by the tax. Unemployment soars, merchandise remains unsold on the shelves and an economic monkey wrench stalls the machinery of enterprise and employment.

REMOVE IT NOW, EFFECTIVE NOW!

While law-makers fiddle, small businesses burn! We respectfully suggest that the first matter of business for the Second Session of the 81st Congress should be the enactment of the necessary legislation to eliminate these wartime excise taxes, EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY. Each passing day of continued existence, with the public convinced of imminent removal, is a lost day for American industry.

REMOVE IT NOW, EFFECTIVE NOW!

We ask Congressmen to ask themselves, "Would you buy luggage for yourself or your family today, knowing that next week or next month the extra 20% will be eliminated?" Certainly, employees of the Skyway organization and of Skyway luggage dealers from coast to coast are cheered by the knowledge that this oppressive tax is doomed to an early death. But speaking for the entire luggage industry, we urge Congress to remove it now, effective now!

America takes stock at mid-Century

Here we are—a free nation 150 million strong—half-way through the Twentieth Century.

A nation to which the world's free peoples look for leadership. A nation vigorous, resourceful, unafraid—and dedicated to progress.

Let's take a look at what we have accomplished here and how we've been able to do it. Maybe that will give us a picture of what the future holds—if we just use the common sense the good Lord gave us.

Who could have predicted in 1900 that the next 50 years in America would be the greatest period of social, economic and industrial progress in history?

Who could have foreseen the wonders that lay ahead? That by 1950 the amount of goods consumed by the average person in the United States would have risen two and one half times—that nearly every family would own an automobile, a telephone, a radio—that real wages (wages in terms of what they will buy) would more than double while we were reducing the work week from about 58 to 40 hours?

Every American ought to understand the system that has made all this possible. For it is the newest, most revolutionary, most productive way of life this old earth has ever seen. It has done more for the average man than any other ever invented—because it is built on freedom, competition and opportunity.

Now is the time for every American to take stock of the system that has made us the world's most fortunate people. Here is a chance for communities, companies, trade and labor groups, civic and religious groups to celebrate this milestone of progress.

Today the eyes of the world are on us. Everywhere the free and slave systems are at grips. It is a time for new resolutions—for thought and prayer. It is time for every free man to make his voice heard. It is time for us to understand not only how our system works but how each one of us can help make it still better. The answers are in the free booklet, "The Miracle of America." Send for it now!

4 Locomotive Plants To Be Struck Sunday

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 3 (AP).—The CIO United Steelworkers today called a strike effective at midnight Sunday at four plants of the American Locomotive Co.

The plants, employing about 10,000 are at Schenectady, Auburn, Dunkirk, N. Y., and Latrobe, Pa.

Joseph P. Molony, Buffalo district director of the union and chairman of its ALCO negotiating committee, said today he had notified R. B. McColl, ALCO president, of the action in a telegram.

The telegram said in part:

"Your company's denial of adequate pension and insurance plans, together with the company's insistence on a wage cut at some of its plants, persuades the union that collective bargaining is not the purpose of your company."

The company had been notified a strike was "inevitable" unless it quickly improved an offer the union rejected as "entirely unacceptable."

Wages are not an issue at Dunkirk and Latrobe, but Molony said the company had threatened a wage cut at Schenectady and Auburn.

The union is seeking a pension-insurance program similar to that obtained recently in the basic steel industry and a number of steel fabricators.

Riders Walk In Tulsa As Bus Drivers Strike

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 3 (AP).—Tulsans felt the full pinch of a bus strike today when workers had to walk, thumb rides or wait for busy cabs.

The union drivers of the Tulsa City Lines walked out early Sunday, but this was the first day the full force of the strike was felt. There was little inconvenience during the holiday period.

The drivers, members of the Amalgamated Association of Electric Street Car and Motor Coach Operators (AFL), disagreed with the company over consolidation and elimination of some routes.

Man Cleared In Death of Co-Worker

A coroner's jury decided yesterday that a fist fight did not cause the death of Alvin S. Dreux, 36, of 1881 3d st. nw.

The jury exonerated George Cousins, 22, of 1726 Lamont st. nw., who told about the fight after hearing that Dreux had died last Friday.

Cousins and Dreux, it was testified, got into an argument last Wednesday at the Hecht Co. warehouse, 1401 New York ave. ne., where they were employed.

Cousins testified he knocked out Dreux, adding that he and another worker revived Dreux and the men returned to work.

Another witness was Dreux's landlady, Mrs. Eugenia Nelson. She said she heard him calling for help Wednesday night, went to his room and found him in bed, shaking. She said wine bottles were in the room.

She said she telephoned police but when she told them Dreux had been drinking they advised her she would have to call a private ambulance. Mrs. Nelson said Dreux was in the same condition the following day, so she called a hospital and was told they could not take such a case. The next day, she said, she found Dreux dead on the floor of his room.

The coroner's jury ruled that Dreux had died of a cerebral hemorrhage after falling out of bed.

Senators Would Confine Red Diplomats to D. C.

By The Associated Press

Two Republican Senators proposed yesterday that diplomats from Communist-controlled countries be denied the right to travel outside the city of Washington.

Senators Ferguson of Michigan and Brewster of Maine told reporters the travel ban should be enforced until Russia and her satellites permit United States diplomats the right of free travel.

Desertion Charge

Former D. C. Rector Sued For Divorce

THE REV. ARMAND EYLER

The wife of the Rev. Armand T. Eyler, former rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, yesterday filed suit in District Court for absolute divorce. She charged her husband deserted her when he resigned his post here two years ago.

Mrs. Eyler, 36, the former Mary Adeline Sheppard of Savannah, Ga., asked custody of their two children, support and maintenance. Their 16-year-old son, Tise, is a student at Episcopal High School, and their 12-year-old daughter, Marcelle Bonneau, is attending Hannah More Academy, Reisterstown, Md.

In her suit, Mrs. Eyler says she has custody of the children now and that their father's monthly contribution of $130 is "reasonable and satisfactory" in view of his income. He is now rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Greenville, Tenn.

The Rev. Mr. Eyler, 42, resigned as rector of St. Margaret's, Connecticut ave. and Bancroft pl. nw., on January 1, 1948. Ill health was the reason given.

Reached at his family home in Savannah by telephone yesterday, he said he will not contest the divorce, but plans to consult his attorney about custody of the children.

Mrs. Eyler charges that "on or about January 2, 1948," he "did desert and abandon" her.

Dice Game Topped Off By Free-For-All

A dice game in a dimly lit room at 2d and C sts. ne., mushroomed into a free-for-all fight late yesterday afternoon, involving firsts, feet, an ax and a police revolver.

One of the crap-shooters, Calvin Downs, 40, of 232 C st. ne., was charged with assaulting a police officer with a dangerous weapon—the ax. Downs was also booked on charges of assaulting his sister, Effie, 38, with his fists, and destroying private property.

Tempers flared during the game, according to Lieut. John O. Hite of the Ninth Precinct, when Downs claimed he was being cheated.

In the ensuing arguments, Hite said, Downs smashed a radio, a smoking stand, a bed and a chair, and kicked the panels out of a door. When his sister left to call police, he belted her on her jaw, which was abcessed, Hite reported.

Pvt. W. G. Grant, responding to the call for help, met Downs coming down the dark staircase, ax in hand, and commenced firing.

He missed, but Downs dropped the ax and the game was over.

Police took four persons to the station house for questioning about the game and the assaults, but only Downs was charged.

ruling in the unusual case involving a diplomat, his Belgian-born wife and her pets, including a cat now in cat heaven, Judge Jones philosophized at some length on man's best friend, managed to work in some doggerel and a sentence about "the dogs of war."

But the ruling wasn't funny to Mrs. C. C. M. Pedersen, the diplomat's wife, of 4509 43d pl. nw. She said she was "absolutely not pleased with the result" which awarded the Pedersens $450 instead of the $1742 for which they had sued the Government.

The case grew out of the Pedersens' transfer back to the United States from Ankara, Turkey, in the spring of 1945. Pedersen, then a State Department administrative officer, has since left the department to work for the Navy in the Pentagon.

The Pedersens got to Cairo, but the wartime transportation situation was bad, and besides there were no accommodations for Mrs. Pedersen's pets, two dogs and a cat. Judge Jones said Mrs. Pedersen "irritated" the innkeeper at Port Said, near Cairo, by insisting "upon bathing her two large dogs in the public bathrooms." She refused to sail until she could take the pets. Then the Pedersens sued for $10 a day allowance for the period they were kept waiting.

Judge Jones said Mrs. Pedersen "was certainly within her rights in refusing to travel without her pets," but that she had no legal basis for charging the Government $10 a day "for the extra delay caused by her attitude, especially in a time of national peril, when family separations were the rule and not the exception, however appealing her sentiment may have been."

At her home here yesterday, Mrs. Pedersen said the pets in question were a blue chow named "Ourson," meaning "teddy bear" in French, who is still with her; a skye terrier named "Dickie," who has died, and a Persian cat named "Bibi-nette," who also has died but not before leaving a kitten named "Nicho."

In place of the two dead pets—they died after Mrs. Pedersen finally got them to the U. S. A.—she has acquired a Russian wolfhound named "Ivan."

Surrounded by the pets, Mrs. Pedersen yesterday blamed the whole trouble on the American consul at Cairo who, it appears, never had a dog for a pet, not even a mongrel.

Judge Jones dismissed the cat in his opinion merely by saying it "has always been a favorite pet with many people."

But, sighed the judge, the law is the law. And in this case it was on the side of the antidog State Department.

Seized by Police

Glass Points To Hit-Run Suspect

A small particle of glass brought about the arrest early yesterday of a motorist in a hit-and-run traffic death case.

The motorist, Calvin N. Dorsey, 19, of 6100 Brinkley rd., Oxon Hill, Md., was charged with manslaughter and hit-and-run.

Police said Dorsey admitted he was the driver who struck down Henry Meeks, 58, of 206 5th st. se., at 5th and K sts. ne. Christmas night. Meeks, the District's seventy-first and final traffic fatality of 1949, died December 30 in Casualty Hospital.

At the spot where Meeks was hit, police accident investigation unit men found a small sliver of glass. After a careful study of this fragment, police were ordered to be on the lookout for a 1938 Buick with a shattered fender light.

Motorcycle Policeman John W. Bonomo spotted such a car shortly before midnight Monday night in the 400 block of Delaware ave. sw.

How Alexandria Wants to Grow

value of the territory at the $17,500,000 figure.

Approximately 3500 people live in this 7½-square-mile area, against 60,000 (unofficial, 1949) in the present 7 1/3-square-mile area of Alexandria. Only the Lee-Jackson and Lincolnia Elementary Schools in the area would have to be taken over into Alexandria's school system.

The territory contains such improvements as:

The community of Lincolnia; the Shirley-Duke apartment project; the Army Quartermaster Depot; the Virginia Theological Seminary section, with its fine homes; a small portion of the Fairlington apartment development; the Fruit Growers Express; a section of the Southern Railroad's main line, and a 3½-mile section of Shirley hwy.

Smoot explained that his committee discarded suggestions to annex territory south of the city because being highly improved, its absorption into Alexandria would cut heavily into Fairfax County revenue from Sanitary District No. 1.

He also said that the condition of the western land would permit the city to supervise its development in conformity with city planning. Alexandria, he said, will extend sewer lines into the area. In fact, it already has some lines in—mostly along Duke st. extended.

Arlington County territory was ruled out, the committee reported, because of the State law which stipulates a minimum area for a county. Arlington approaches the minimum.

Catholic U. Plans New Courses in Writing, Speech

Instructors will be Leo Brady, playwright and author; the Rev. John L. Madden, of the Preachers Institute at Catholic University, and the Rev. Sebastian Miklas, O.F.M. Cap., Director of Adult Education at Catholic University.

Teachers Ask $200 Pay Raise In Fairfax

The Fairfax County Education Association, composed of 480 public school teachers, yesterday asked the county school board for a $200 raise in pay.

The proposal would increase teachers' annual salaries by $200 instead of $100 after completion of the initial two-year period of probation. The scale would provide $100 annual raises thereafter to culminate in a ceiling of $3600 instead of the present $3400 for teachers with a bachelor's degree, and of $3700 instead of $3500 for those with a master's degree.

In another action, the board announced tentative selection of four sites in the Bucknell Manor subdivision near Fort Hunt rd. in Alexandria as locations for school buildings in the future.

5 Bills Proposed By Federation In Arlington

Two local bills and three Statewide measures were proposed for enactment into Virginia law by the Arlington County Civic Federation last night.

The local measure calls for a county referendum on a nonpartisan election law for county and school boards and for the granting of franchise power to the county board.

The State-wide bills would provide for repeal of the State poll-tax law; "permissive" jury duty for Virginia women and alignment of Virginia State income tax laws with Federal tax procedures.

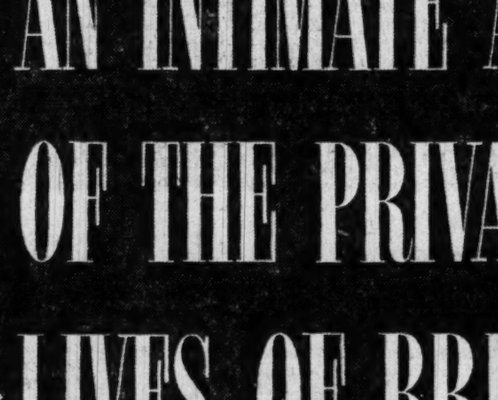
AN INTIMATE ACCOUNT OF THE PRIVATE LIVES OF BRITAIN'S ROYAL FAMILY
"The Little Princesses"—written exclusively for Ladies' Home Journal by Marion Crawford, for 17 years Governess to Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose



Crawfie and the Princesses in a photo taken by the Queen. Later, during the war years, Elizabeth served with the Auxiliary Territorial Service, drove cars through blacked-out London. Margaret, a fast driver, liked to take the wheel of the King's Daimler, make the chauffeur ride in back.

The Princesses with their grandmother at the coronation. Elizabeth, worried how Margaret would act, reported afterward that "she was wonderful. I had to nudge her only once or twice." The girls were warm friends, but had spats like all children. During these, Elizabeth was quick with a left hook. Margaret used her royal teeth.

Edward VIII—"Uncle David"—shown after the death of the girls' grandfather, George V. Later, when Edward first brought Mrs. Simpson into Court circles, Elizabeth said, "Crawfie, who IS she?" In "The Little Princesses" Crawfie gives a vivid, behind-the-scenes picture of the Simpson crisis.

Elizabeth and her first love, Owen the groom. Horses delighted the children. Their favorite book was "Black Beauty"; their favorite playthings, toy horses; their favorite people, the grooms. One day when Elizabeth asked her father's advice about some plans, he replied testily: "Don't ask me, ask Owen. Who am I to make suggestions?"

In "The Little Princesses," her great, unprecedented account, Marion Crawford takes you inside palace walls to share with you the 17 years she lived with the Royal Family.

Never before has such an intimate feature been written by a member of the reigning family's official household. And never before—editors Bruce Gould and Beatrice Blackmar Gould report—have they known a manuscript to arouse such glowing enthusiasm in everyone who has read it.

In and out of this precedent-shattering story stream figures who made history: Ramsay MacDonald, Winston Churchill, Field Marshal Montgomery, Clement Attlee. Here are Mrs. Simpson and Edward VIII . . . the story behind the abdication, and the coronation of George VI . . . the outbreak of war seen close-up from the nerve-center of Empire.

"The Little Princesses" is a heart-tugging account of intimate family life—from the days of the girls' splashy childhood baths to Elizabeth's romance with Philip and her marriage. The King's and Queen's experience as parents, you'll find, is in many poignant ways like your own. No father, no mother, will want to miss it.

It has already been chosen by the Book-of-the-Month Club for publication late in 1950, but you can read it first in Ladies' Home Journal.

Jerome F. Barnard

There is no means of measuring the loss to the community in the death of one of its active professional and civic leaders, but from any point of view that loss is great. In the case of Jerome Fanning Barnard, native Washingtonian and president of the District Bar Association, the loss is especially notable because of the great variety of his activities. Mr. Barnard was not a headline maker; he worked quietly in his profession as an expert on wills and probate matters and in his civic activities as an organizer and a dispenser of good will. Widely known in both legal and civic circles, he elicited affection as well as respect and esteem.

His greatest public service occurred in connection with the two world wars. In World War I he was an active participant. In World War II, as chairman of the District Bar Association's committee on the war effort, he rendered a herculean service by recruiting volunteer legal talent for draft boards, advisory committees and other war agencies in need of legal aid. He became the chief liaison between the legal profession in Washington and the war agencies. In addition, he was enormously helpful to lawyers going into the armed services, as he was in peacetime to young lawyers coming into the profession.

Apparently the same devotion to duty and a similar genial spirit of cooperation characterized his civic work in numerous local organizations. Mr. Barnard was the type of citizen on whom the community relies heavily to carry on its manifold activities. The loss resulting from his death at the early age of 54 will thus be felt far beyond his immediate circle of relatives and friends.

Frankness Preferred

As the new Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, Edward W. Barrett will have a job as broad in scope and as significant as any in the State Department. He will be an adviser on public opinion to the Secretary of State; he will be responsible for the foreign information and education programs; he will be in charge of keeping the American public informed on foreign policy; and he will direct American participation in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. These are all fields in which frankness and a minimum of pretense will pay dividends.

In all respects but one the Barrett appointment is admirable. It is fallacious to think that the only good men come from outside the Government, and the President could have helped boost the morale of the career service by making his choice within the State Department. This, however, is no reflection on Mr. Barrett. As editorial director of Newsweek, as a participant in UNESCO and with previous service in War Information and psychological warfare, he has an amazingly good background for his job. He is known as an extremely competent administrator. More important, he is devoid of any razzle-dazzle or "big-shot" complex.

Among Mr. Barrett's many responsibilities, foreign broadcasts are perhaps the most spectacular, though by no means the most important. Here he has an opportunity to place more emphasis on quality and less on physical facilities and technique. What is needed most in the Voice of America is a consistent philosophy, and this entails recognizing the Voice for what it is: an instrument of warfare dealing with men's minds. If the purpose of psychological warfare is to cause other peoples to reject communism, then the Voice ought to be aggressively exploiting every chance to place the Communists on the defensive. This would not mean any departure from truthfulness, but it would mean using the truth as a weapon of propaganda. As Ladislas Farago pointed out in a recent issue of The Reporter, the Voice ought to be the most authoritative source of information on the Tito-Stalin rift. For it to exploit the full potential of this split, the cooperation of American intelligence agencies will be necessary.

But it is easy to overstress the importance of the Voice of America as compared with other media and contacts. What the people of India think of the United States, for example, is of infinitely greater immediate significance than the at best hopeful efforts to win friends behind the iron curtain. Ties with Latin America have never received the serious attention they deserve. There is room for a good deal of fence-mending in the State Department's relations with the American people. Mr. Barrett could seek no better goal than to end the atmosphere of double-talk that too often surrounds State Department proclamations and insist on the rugged honesty that ought to characterize our foreign policy.

Superbomb

Whether or not to recommend a project for developing the hydrogen-powered atomic superbomb is the gravest and most difficult question that Mr. Truman has been called upon to answer since the decision to drop the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima. Indeed, the choice may be the most cosmic that has confronted any chief of state in war or peace in American history; it may determine the survival of the civilization that the Western world has known for 2500 years. This terrific burden falls initially on the shoulders of one man—whether to build the superbomb or to leave it in its present stage as a theoretical possibility.

The hydrogen bomb has been advanced as far as it can go on paper; it remains to try to make it. The prospects are that it can be made and that it will explode as designed. In theory, at least, it has no upper limit. It will be not merely 1000 times more powerful than present atomic bombs, but n times more powerful, with n any multiple its makers choose. It will have no peaceful use. The temperatures involved are beyond any human control or management. It will be solely a weapon, fit to fry to a crisp tens or hundreds of square miles at a crack.

Mr. Truman's own advisers have already marshaled and put before him the arguments for and against the project. On the one side there is the argument that no nation, menaced as fundamentally as we are, can afford to pass up the opportunity of making the most colossal engine of war ever dreamed of. There is the additional argument that our mere willingness to begin its manufacture would serve as an irresistible bargaining lever that would force the Russians into agreements building a truly and permanently peaceful world. If we don't take the step, maybe the Russians will anyway; if they could make a plutonium bomb, they can probably make a hydrogen bomb.

On the other side many persons are probably urging moral considerations, though these are different only in degree from those which were overridden in the decision to drop a plutonium bomb on Hiroshima. On practical grounds, would we use the bomb even if we made it? Moreover, a city can be destroyed only once, and the plutonium bomb seems to be capable of doing a pretty thorough job of that. Would there be, in other words, any additional strategical or tactical advantage to warrant the huge effort of making this monstrous weapon? Would its military potential justify the almost inevitable shelving of peacetime application of atomic energy that would accompany a decision to concentrate on the hydrogen bomb? Would the Russians, who were unmoved by our temporary monopoly of the first bomb, feel any less confident of their ultimate ability to match us in making a superbomb?

Whatever the President decides—and the decision will be made before Chairman Lilienthal quits the Atomic Energy Commission on February 15—his choice can be only a recommendation. It will not be irrevocable; nor can it, in view of the immense expense involved, be kept secret. If the recommendation is affirmative, Congress and the Nation must argue it in the course of making the enormous appropriations that will be necessary. If it is negative, it is always subject to reversal. Indeed, the fact that we have the potential is such a monumental piece of knowledge that it will be the subject of the most intense and most comprehensive discussion as long as the cold war persists. In the meantime, the fact may be noted that President Truman has had the courage to meet this most momentous of all questions head-on, rather than to try to duck it.

Congress Payrolls

The investigation of congressional payrolls urged the other day by Representative Usher L. Burdick would be a sensible and salutary move. Unfortunately, the recent conviction of Representative J. Parnell Thomas for putting on his payroll persons not actually employed has generated a good deal of suspicion respecting the practices of his colleagues. Former Representative May's conviction for accepting a bribe, while not actually related, of course, to any payroll irregularity, served also to diminish public confidence in Congress. The public deserves to be reassured about the character of its National Legislature. And such reassurance can be obtained only through a frank revelation of all payroll records.

There is nothing accusatory and nothing improper in asking members of Congress to disclose the names and salaries of all persons serving on their staffs. So far as the House is concerned, this is settled practice under a House rule requiring that payrolls of Representatives be kept available for public inspection. Senator Humphrey was quite justified in saying it is "abominable" that Senate office payrolls are not also public. Information concerning them was suppressed by the Senate secretary during the two-year period of GOP congressional supremacy. The present Senate secretary, Leslie Biffle, has directed that all names and salaries again be published.

The mere availability of lists will not altogether suffice, however. Payroll padding, nepotism and kickbacks can be made fully apparent, if they exist, only through a careful study by a joint Senate-House committee given adequate authority. While these practices are undoubtedly rare, there is some basis for public apprehension that Congress is not wholly free from them. They grew out of the days when legislators were absurdly underpaid and found it necessary to eke out their meager stipends by devices which, while perhaps not actually illegal, were certainly contrary to sound public policy. Now that congressional pay has been put at a respectable level, there is no longer any excuse for the perpetuation of these practices. Congress itself, obviously, is the only body that can censor the conduct of its members. It ought to do so in recognition of its responsibility to the public.

China Dogfight

Messrs. Hoover and Taft have thrown their weight behind the China interventionists in Congress who would bolster Chiang Kai-shek and keep the island from falling into Communist hands. The extent of their following in Congress is anybody's guess. But, judging from the Administration's timorousness on China, one would think the China interventionists controlled Congress. A week ago the impression was given out that a new policy was in the making on Formosa. It may be that some officials, more loyal to General MacArthur than to the President, were trying to embarrass Mr. Truman. But the signs, read against the pussyfooting of the past, were that the Administration seems to have been indulging in politicking in order to lull the China interventionists.

This sort of thing only serves to befog the world about the aims of American policy. In Asia and in Europe a chorus of critics, assuming that China policy has in fact done a sort of Palestinian about-face, is berating the United States. The lesson is obvious. At a time when world peace depends upon a clear diplomatic course by the United States, as well as upon the economic stability of the country, politicking should stop at the water's edge. This can be done only by the Administration assuming its constitutional responsibilities as the initiator of foreign policy. Hitherto the Administration has backed and filled on China out of fear of the China interventionists. Against its better judgment it agreed in 1947 to military aid for Chiang Kai-shek. Against its better judgment it agreed to another appropriation at the last session of Congress for the general area of China. The Administration has got itself tied up in a bundle of contradictions in handling the issue of the blockade that Chiang Kai-shek is trying to lay down in southern China waters. Secretary Acheson even went so far as to say a few months ago that the Administration would take up with Congress the question, when it arises, of recognition of Communist China. The vacillation has not been as bad as in the case of Palestine, but it has been progressive, and in respect of recognition, involves an abdication of the President's prerogative.

So in this matter a reassertion of presidential leadership is called for lest even the initiating in foreign affairs be lost in a congressional-legislative dogfight. In short, Mr. Truman ought to take warning from the experience of Mr. Hoover, who himself was an example, as Mr. Stimson's memoirs testify, of the sad fate of a President who is afraid to lead in foreign affairs.

Honest John

A District grand jury looking over the record of John Maragon's appearance before a Senate subcommittee last August has apparently gained an impression—very prevalent among observers at the time—that he had not been altogether candid about his business activities. These activities were themselves somewhat obscure, not to say mysterious. They seemed to revolve around a close friendship with the President's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, parlayed by Mr. Maragon into a reputation as a White House intimate. This reputation led several businessmen, by their own account, to seek Mr. Maragon's aid in getting contracts or concessions from the Government. But, according to Mr. Maragon's testimony before the Senate subcommittee, he never represented any firm dealing with the Government and never got paid for any such representation.

There was quite enough conflict between Mr. Maragon's testimony and the testimony of the businessmen he said he did not represent to warrant a grand jury study of perjury charges. Moreover, Mr. Maragon, normally a very voluble fellow and never more so than when he talked to Senate subcommittee members behind closed doors, had a sudden attack of reticence when he was asked questions in a public hearing. He declined to answer on the ground that to do so would involve self-incrimination. Perhaps, if he finds his tongue again, he will be able to explain everything when he has his day in court.

"Stand Pat Colonialism"

In the Paris edition of the December 22 New York Herald Tribune, I read a reprint of your comment on the stand taken by Britain and France at United Nations Assembly over the request for information from non-self-governing territories (editorial published December 7).

May I say that I entirely agree with your comment. That U. N. discussion has exposed a very serious state of affairs. A few men have committed a whole nation to a decision which at most only 1 percent would support. That does not seem to fit in with democratic principles. The remedy appears to be more education on the fundamental issues about which the people know nothing and dread nothing until the harm is done.

Let the U. N. demand a referendum on colonialism in Great Britain and it would be found that 99 percent of the people abhor it. They agree with President Truman and Prime Minister Nehru that colonialism is an evil thing and must be abolished. I am a New Zealander and hate colonialism and all who support it.

In the Southern Hemisphere there are 12 million Europeans in British territories and they have no hope of maintaining their "white supremacy" policies except with the active help of the United States of America. Britain, France, Belgium, Portugal and Holland are impotent; they can neither properly develop or defend their colonial empires. Therefore, the stand made by Britain and France at the U. N. is both stupid and very dangerous. As you put it, they are furnishing ammunition for communism. A. J. SIGGINS.

"General Welfare"

The President and his partisans reiterate glibly that the purpose of a government is to promote the general welfare. But they are radically wrong in their notion of what is really welfare. It is not selling independence for a false security; losing the opportunity of developing personality and character. It is the right to have that which one has earned and justly deserves.

The worst that can be done for a person or a people is to give them everything that you can make them think they want.

Then they assume that they alone desire the general welfare; whereas every good citizen wants his country's welfare, and trusts the purpose of our Government, and works as he thinks best for its fulfillment.

But those now in power do not hesitate to use the prestige of their station and the resources of their country for their own self-interest.

Recent Administrations early discovered that they could command majorities by gratuities, political favors and unfulfillable promises. This they have done until our masses have been so corrupted that no office-seeker thinks that he can be elected otherwise.

If a citizenry is to remain worthy it must retain its independence. When you buy a vote, you strangle a soul. And no government has a right to reduce its people to servility.

Roosevelt Bridge

It is fitting that the City of Washington and the District of Columbia follow, at long last, the lead of other cities in naming an imposing structure after our great late President. Let me, therefore, urge my fellow citizens to follow my lead in writing to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia urging them to name the new South Capitol st. bridge the Franklin D. Roosevelt Bridge.

Survey Of Literature

As a teacher of American literature I protest against the so-called "survey" of American writing since 1900 which appeared in your January 1 edition. I fail to see what of value is accomplished by nonsense like this.

I cite only a few of Lee Grove's misstatements in evidence. (1) Stephen Crane was not a "naturalist" in any sense of that poor battered word, and "realism," if it means anything, does not mean a kind of writing that "reveals the flaws in character that lead to evil" and "asserts that free will permits a choice." Such pseudostatements are in fact entirely unintelligible to me. (2) To imply that Anderson, Fitzgerald, Hemingway, Faulkner and Caldwell attempted to "simplify" life (sic!), and thereby to "flee" from its "complexities" is a monstrous iniquity if there ever was one. Anybody who has read "Tender Is the Night" or "The Sound and the Fury" would have difficulty in comprehending such an assertion.

(3) It is sheer perversity to say that Melville seems to be seventh in importance among American writers, on a list including the mountebank Poe and excluding Henry James, who is very likely the greatest of all American writers.

The whole article is riddled with that infuriating anti-intellectualism which seems to be endemic in American journalism. The piece, like Sterling North's "reviews," succeed only in doing its little bit toward making the already difficult position of the serious writer in American culture still more difficult. That is to say, it contributes toward hindering the solution of what has long been a crucial cultural problem: the fostering of an environment conducive to the production of a tradition of good writing. If that is what you want, you have succeeded.

Hawaiian Statehood And D. C. Home Rule

On a recent trip to Hawaii I was struck by the similarity of the opposition to Statehood for Hawaii and the opposition to home rule for the District of Columbia. In each case the principal factors are (1) fear of big business and financial interests that their present control of the local government will be disturbed, and (2) fear of some persons that elections will be dominated by non-Caucasian races.

Domination of Hawaii's economy by the "big five" families, representing sugar cane, pineapple, transportation, real estate and banking interests, is a well-known fact. These interests were the prime movers in the transformation of the islands from a semitropical paradise inhabited by easy-going natives into a bustling, modern producer of sugar and pineapple products. They very early came into control of the native kingdom, and continued in control of the independent republic which succeeded it.

Annexation to the United States did not greatly disturb their position, even though the territory has practically complete home rule, but they fear that full Statehood will do so. Their position is quite similar to that of the Washington Board of Trade in its opposition to home rule for the District of Columbia.

The racial distribution of the population of the island of Oahu, which includes the city of Honolulu and therefore the bulk of the population of the whole territory, is as follows:

Japanese	33.8%
Caucasian	30.8%
Hawaiian and part Hwn.	15.8%
Filipino	10.1%
Chinese	5.9%
Others (mostly Orientals)	3.6%

Persons of Oriental ancestry therefore constitute slightly more than 50 percent of the population. Should they all vote together they could easily dominate elections, and the Japanese, by their preponderant majority of the Oriental bloc, would exercise the final control.

This is the argument covertly used by opponents of Statehood in their so-far unsuccessful attempts to persuade the people of Hawaii to vote against it in popular referenda, in which Statehood has always won by at least a 2-to-1 majority. It is also the principal argument used to influence individual members of Congress against Statehood. Again, this is quite similar to the argument used by opponents of home rule for the District of Columbia, though in the latter case "non-Caucasians" constitute less than 30 percent of the population, which is very far from a majority.

However, the fallacy of this argument is apparent when the facts are examined. Unlike the people of the District of Columbia, the people of Hawaii have the vote in local affairs, and have had it for a long time. They have all the elements of home rule for which the people of the District of Columbia are contending.

If there is anything to the argument, the Japanese should control Hawaiian elections. They do not, and never have. The Territorial Legislature consists of a Senate of 15 members and a House of Representatives of 30 members. There are 2 Japanese in the Senate and 9 in the House. The municipal government of Honolulu consists of a mayor and a board of supervisors, only one of which is a Japanese. The mayor is Irish-Hawaiian.

All of this shows the speciousness of any argument that a free and intelligent electorate would be controlled by racial blocs. It is no more valid in the District of Columbia than it is in Hawaii, where the actual facts show it to be invalid.

It is interesting to note that the very thing which big business opposes in Hawaii, i.e., Statehood, is substantially the same thing that its counterpart in the District of Columbia, the Board of Trade, proclaims to be the first essential to any grant of suffrage. Of course, national representation is not quite the same thing as Statehood. Should it be granted, the District would still lack the sovereign powers of a State, which is what the "big five" in Hawaii really oppose. Since they now control the economy of Hawaii despite a full measure of home rule there it would seem that the Washington Board of Trade is unduly alarmed about the possibility of losing control of the District of Columbia under a home rule government.

Happy Vista—Tax Free Mink

By Malvina Lindsay

Cheaper 'Luxuries'

THE MINK COAT, oddly enough, has become one of the main symbols of the luxury tax. The idea seems to have gotten around that if excise taxes were slashed—as House Minority Leader Joe Martin is demanding—virtually everybody would rush out to buy a mink coat.

That is another way of saying, or at least hoping, that a lot of people would rush out to buy muskrat coats, "processed to simulate mink" of course, also to send telegrams, go to movies, theaters, cabarets, take cruises, purchase luggage, handbags, jewelry, cosmetics. Would they?

This question is likely to be hashed over in congressional debate on excises. Backers of excise repeal maintain the public will go into a spurt of buying, boost business and income taxes, and the Government will be the winner. Those opposed say the excise taxes are too good a bird in the hand—yielding around 600 million dollars annually—to be relinquished.

Drives to lift or reduce the excises have been on now for at least three years, and the familiar arguments will be trotted out again, especially the one that excise taxed luxuries are really necessities. These may not be advanced for the "silverblu" mink, priced possibly at $18,000, or even the ordinary brown mink. But anyway the mink men haven't been doing too badly. The moderate priced furs have been the hardest hit. And since only about 5 percent of the populace goes decked in mink, ermine, and chinchilla, the plight of mink consumers won't have much voting strength with Congress.

BUT EVEN though about three fourths of fur coats sold are said to retail under $400 (not above $398.75, we infer), the mink coat has become the symbol of nearly every woman's glamour aspirations. On all sides is heard the comment, "Just wait till taxes go off and I'm going to get my mink." This could mean anything from rabbit skin to Persian lamb, and it promises a spurt of fur buying, if and when excise taxes are reduced or "adjusted."

This hold of mink on public imagination is a social phenomenon that cannot be explained wholly by the beauty of the fur. Men seem as susceptible to it as women, and apparently in their success dreams see themselves bestowing mink wraps on magazine cover women. Possibly contributing to the mink complex is the frequency of mink in the headlines of high life, as "Actress Arrives With 12 Mink Coats," "Blonde in Mink Coat Shoots Tycoon."

Congress naturally won't go into the mink mystery or even into the strange downrating in glamour of silver fox. But it will consider the depression in the fur industry, caused, say manufacturers, by the excise tax. Unemployment and decreased income taxes have been by-products of this. And this country has an expanding fur breeding industry to consider.

MINK MAY be a symbol in luxury tax thinking, but the $5 handbag—on which a $1 tax must be paid—is more nearly the substance in excise arguments. Several national organizations of women, including several labor groups, are embattled to lift excises on what they maintain in every woman's necessity, the handbag.

Jewelers also are ready to point to the necessity of watches, engagement and wedding rings, silverware, to say nothing of the omnipresent pearl choker. The cosmetic manufacturers can make equally good cases for lipstick and babies' dusting powder. Entertainment and transportation people likewise can hold up their end of the argument.

Unfortunately the question that cannot be answered in advance is: How much would an adjustment in excises help business?

The lifting of credit Regulation W didn't bring the surge in buying that was hoped. And the mood of consumers, which is the main thing to be considered, is now hardheaded, as was shown by Christmas buying. Yet a payment to veterans is in the offing and bank deposits are fat. Many persons are holding back on their bigger investments as furs, jewelry, trips, hoping for a change in taxes.

And change is what it is likely to be. "Tax free" luxuries, at least in the higher brackets, are not in the picture. At most a return of prewar levies, at least an "adjustment in inequities" as the Administration calls it, is all that can be hoped for. Compromises are likely to be made—last year the jewelers worked hard to get sales under $25 made tax free. Those who are literally waiting for tax free sables will need at least a rabbit skin, possibly several, in which to outsit the cold war.

Ex-Nazis Here

In the December 25 paper I read of a former Nazi who interrupted his Christmas tree trimming in order to participate bravely but unsuccessfully in a dangerous operation to save a little girl's life. The story carries a Philadelphia dateline.

I am greatly interested in and should appreciate learning how this man was able to come here to live, and whether we have many other "ex"-Nazis among us. J. SEIDENBERG.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Pandora's Box II

THE CASE for launching another Manhattan District project, in order to build a "superbomb," seems at first hearing like a Walpurgis night dream of total destruction. Yet this case is being seriously made, at this moment, by important personalities on the highest governmental level. The essential arguments must, therefore, be set down.

In brief, it is theoretically feasible to build a hydrogen bomb with something like 1000 times the force of the uranium-plutonium bomb that fell on Hiroshima. It may cost anywhere from two to four billion dollars to build such a bomb in the shortest possible space of time. The real issue in debate—a bitter commentary on the state of the world—is whether such bombs can be surely delivered to their proper targets.

To be blunt about it, the vital centers of the Soviet Union are the obvious potential targets, whether for the hydrogen bomb of the future, or for our existing stockpile of uranium-plutonium bombs. Great distances, uncertain topography and other factors will always make it extremely difficult to hit targets in Russia with reasonable accuracy. And the chief attraction of the hydrogen bomb is that it will reduce the premium on accuracy in any bombing attack.

This is simply because such a bomb should theoretically devastate an area of from 60 to 100 square miles, in one ghastly detonation. Hence it should transform what would be a wide miss, even with a uranium-plutonium bomb, into a direct hit consuming a whole city. Even for conventional bombing, this is crucially important. Futhermore, its importance may later be increased very greatly, by the development of long-range guided missiles.

PROVIDED a pilotless aircraft is the type selected, it has been possible to build the airframe of a long-range missile at any time since the war. The most-talked-about design is a stripped-down pilotless jet bomber capable of several thousand miles of flight, at just subsonic speeds and at very high altitudes. How to guide such a missile has always been the question.

In the last year, however, the basis obstacle to long-range missile guidance has been successfully surmounted. As was reported in this space a "nonprecessable" gyroscope has been designed at M.I.T. This almost miraculous instrument is simply a gyroscope whose accuracy is not disturbed by friction. Because it is dependably stable, it provides the long-sought "brain" for missile guidance systems.

The new gyroscope can, for example, form the basis of a mechanism that will control a missile during thousands of miles of flight by automatical celestial navigation. Equally, it can be married to the radar target locater that will send the missile home in the last stage of its long course. And while these, or other, guidance methods can hardly achieve pinpoint hits, they should bring the missiles quite near enough to their targets, if the warheads are hydrogen bombs.

Already, therefore, fleets of intercontinental guided missiles, carrying hydrogen bombs, are expected in certain authoritative quarters to be the strategic attack force of the future. With all due allowance for inevitable disappointments, some such development is certainly feasible in theory. Those who expect theory to be translated into practice are the advocates of an immediate special effort to build a hydrogen bomb.

THE opponents of such an effort, on the other hand, are sharply critical of these lurid visions of the future. They do not attack the underlying theory, although they note in passing that our present, chaotic research and development program is unlikely to achieve the sort of result outlined above. Their criticism rests, rather, on their belief that in air warfare the defense is now being developed even more rapidly than the offense.

Within the past 14 months, American strategic air capabilities have already been materially reduced by the appearance of an excellent Soviet jet fighter and the beginning of a Soviet air warning net. Piloted and pilotless aircraft alike are already threatened by the prototype of an effective antiaircraft guided missile. The whole present theory of bombing could be upset by already-discussed devices to jam radar target l caters. If progress with these defensive weapons really outdistances progress with the weapons of offense, even a stockpile of hydrogen bombs will be largely a frozen asset.

A committee of the Government's highest scientific advisers has therefore been wisely chosen to study the current desirability of a great hydrogen project, just as President Conant and Dr. Vannevar Bush studied this question immediately after the war. On what falls within their province, the findings of the scientists should be final. Unfortunately, however, not even the greatest scientists can resolve the other, far deeper and graver issues involved in this secret debate within the Government. And these also must be examined in a subsequent report.

Senator Benton

By Marquis Childs

Connecticut Proving Ground

IF THE straws now blowing in the political wind mean anything, 1950 promises some major changes in the line-up in Congress. Familiar faces will be missing before the year has run its course to usher in a new Congress.

Childs

One new face is already to be discovered on the Democratic side of the aisle in the Senate. Senator Raymond E. Baldwin, a Republican, resigned to accept a place on the Supreme Court of his native Connecticut by appointment of Gov. Chester Bowles, Democrat and Fair Dealer. To Baldwin's seat Bowles named his good friend and former advertising partner, William Benton.

Benton is that comparatively rare phenomenon—the successful businessman in politics. He is a self-made man who helped to build the advertising firm of Benton & Bowles into one of the most successful in the country. With that behind him he branched out into various other lines, including the publication of an encyclopedia, the marketing of canned music and the administering of the affairs of a great university.

IT IS because he has felt the need and the urge for public service that Benton, at the age of 49, is such a hopeful phenomenon in politics. From its inception he has been associated with the Committee for Economic Development, the remarkable organization that has provided constructive criticism of Government from the business point of view. In CED Benton has been closely associated with his good friend, Paul Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration and formerly president of the Studebaker Corp.

In September of 1945 Benton accepted the thorny assignment as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of the Government's program of information throughout the world. This was in a sense a pioneering job and one bound to stir a hornet's nest of trouble.

Tackling it with the eagerness and the supreme self-confidence that characterize him, Benton annoyed and irritated many people who were accustomed to more caution and discretion in Government. Among them were many of the colleagues who will now be associated with Benton in the Senate.

In an extraordinary session before a congressional committee, he was called on to justify and explain the modern American art he had approved for a traveling collection to be sent to South America and Europe. As publisher and collector, Benton qualifies as an art expert.

But he found his confidence melting away as committee members demanded to know whether that really was an apple or just a daub of red paint. The committee, its ignorance matched only by its arrogance, ruled against any appropriation, however small, to send that "stuff" around the world. Later the State Department sold the collection.

THE BUSINESSMAN in Congress has sometimes in the past found himself baffled by the complexities of politics. The man of action is lost in a body that puts a premium on talk and then more talk.

Benton will have a special desire to make good in the Senate. He will want to justify the choice of his friend, Governor Bowles, who went outside the orthodoxy of politics in making the appointment. Next fall Benton will have to run for reelection, as will Connecticut's senior Senator, Brien McMahon.

For the first time in the history of the State, due to a change in the constitution, a Governor will be elected for a four-year term rather than a two-year term. This puts an added emphasis on Bowles' race for reelection, which would draw national interest in any event because of growing speculation that he will be a strong contender for the Democratic nomination for President in 1952.

A current report has it that President Truman, now decided to seek reelection, regards Bowles as the adversary he must get out of the way. In spite of the handicap of an opposition Legislature, Bowles has pushed through some of the measures in his progressive program for Connecticut, conspicuously a housing program that is attracting attention outside the State.

The Connecticut contest thus becomes a key piece in the national picture. And Benton's performance will be watched with critical attention. In general it seems to me good to get new men from other fields into the political arena. They tend to stir the contented politician out of his rut and jolt him into an awareness of all that lies beyond the narrowing political horizon.

Rep. Burdick Proposes Probe Of Pay Kickbacks in Congress

By The Associated Press

An investigation to find out the extent of salary kickbacks and payroll padding in Congress was proposed yesterday by Representative Burdick (R., N. D.)

Burdick introduced a resolution to create a Senate-House committee to do the investigating.

J. Parnell Thomas, formerly a Republican House member from New Jersey, is in jail now for operating a kickback racket that cheated the Government out of thousands of dollars.

Burdick's resolution said that:

"The illegal acts of a few members of Congress as to the abuse of payroll privileges have caused the people, in many places, to believe that there is dishonesty generally among members of Congress.

"And, such beliefs on the part of the people have caused not only disrespect for that body, but have weakened the people's faith in their Government."

He suggested that a special committee of four Representatives and three Senatorr determine what people are on congressional payrolls, what work they do and where, and whether any of them pay any part of their salares back to members of Congress.

The committee would have authority to bring out its evidence in public hearings.

Payrolls of all House members are open to inspection, but those of Senators are not. House payrolls show that many members employ persons who are known to be relatives.

the dairy industry. That prohibits interstate commerce in "filled milk"—evaporated milk in which the natural fat content is replaced by a vegetable fat.

The Gillette-Wiley amendment is the same as a House Agriculture Committee bill that was defeated last year.

Both sides are preparing for a fight to the finish. Dairy farmers and dairy industry leaders are gathered in Washington from 35 States. They will meet in secret at the Statler this morning to plan strategy.

Increase in Margarine Plants

Margarine makers are also marshaling their strength. Since 1940 the number of margarine plants has increased from 42 to 60; the number of dealers from 161,677 to 308,137.

Butter has been fighting a steadily losing battle in recent years. Since 1939, 31 States have abolished or modified their anti-margarine laws. Only 16 States now prohibit yellow margarine—13 States have done away with such laws since 1944.

The butter forces last year lost a spectacular battle in Ohio, where repeal of an act barring yellow margarine was passed by 1,282,606 votes to 799,473. This vote assured the margarine forces two votes in the Senate—Senators Robert A. Taft and John W. Bricker. Bricker had formerly been a supporter of the butter interests.

Recent drops in retail prices of both butter and margarine has resulted in a similar drop in public interest in the repealer bills.

reporters afterward that the resolution was carefully drawn so nobody would get the impression Republicans in Congress were "taking in too much territory."

He emphasized that, in drawing up a statement of aims and purposes, Senate and House Republicans would be speaking for themselves.

He said there might be criticism if Republicans in Congress "tried to set up a party platform."

Millikin said the resolution recognized the interest of the Republican National Committee in the policy statement, and looked forward to a conference with the 15-member committee appointed by Chairman Gabrielson.

He said he was in no position to know whether Gabrielson expected a "merger" of the drafts prepared on the hill and that prepared by members of the national committee.

Millikin said Taft was originally opposed to the drawing up of a policy statement. However, he said, the Ohioan acknowledged there seemed to be a widespread demand for such a statement, and therefore decided to go along. He said a voice vote was taken on the resolution, and he heard only about two dissents.

The Republicans drew up a statement of principles in advance of the 1946 election, when they captured Congress, and this has been used as an argument in favor of a similar statement this year.

How much the 1946 statement contributed to the GOP victory is something hard to answer. Most observers that year attributed the Republican triumph to the meat loss of confidence in resident Truman.

A private showing of the Herblock originals will be held for the gallery staff and invited guests the day before.

Heart Unit Gives $1800 for Study

The Washington Heart Association has allocated $1800 for a study of drugs which inhibit bloodclotting, it was announced last night.

The fund will be used to provide a laboratory assistant to Dr. Benjamin Manchester, attending physician at Gallinger Hospital, who has been testing such drugs, largely heparin and dicumarol, since 1944.

Partial results of the anti-coagulant studies, said the association president, Dr. J. Ross Veal, have impressed the Heart Association with the importance of granting assistance to continue and complete the research. The grant will be administered through George Washington University Medical School.

Heart Attack Kills Woman, 75, When Told of Her Son's Illness

Soon after learning that her son had taken an overdose of sleeping pills, a 75-year-old Washington woman collapsed and died early yesterday.

Mrs. Gilcrest

Mrs. Grace A. Gilcrest of 310 West Clifton Terrace Apartments died only 20 minutes after arriving at Arlington Hospital, where she had rushed to see her son.

The son, Guy Guthrie Gilcrest, jr., 47, of 834 21st st., South, Arlington, was reported "doing well" at the hospital.

Arlington police gave this account:

About 10:30 Monday night Mrs. Guy Gilcrest, jr., returned to her Arlington home and found her husband unconscious on the bathroom floor.

She arranged to have him taken to the hospital, then called his mother and sister. The sister is Mrs. Alice M. Baker, 6406 Elliott pl., Hampshire Knolls, Md.

While Mrs. Guy Gilcrest went on to the hospital, an Arlington policeman waited at the 21st street address to lead the mother and sister to the hospital.

The two cars had gone a distance when Mrs. Baker signaled the policeman to stop. She told him her mother had suffered a heart attack. Arriving at the hospital the mother was admitted as a patient. She died in about 20 minutes.

Mrs. Grace Gilcrest worked in various Government departments for about 15 years, retiring 15 years ago from the Department of Agriculture. She was the widow of the late Guy Guthrie Gilcrest, an auditor with the Internal Revenue Bureau. The Gilcrests came here in 1918 from Centerville, Iowa.

Mrs. Gilcrest had been secretary of the Columbia Chapter Number 15 of the Eastern Star for over 22 years. She was also active in the council of the Columbia Heights Christian Church.

Survivors besides her son and Mrs. Baker include two other daughters, Mrs. Helen G. Snyder and Mrs. Sarah M. Heritage, both of 310 West Clifton Terrace Apartments.

Services will be at 1 p. m. Friday at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Jachym Brushed Off at Nats' Stockholders Meeting

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

YOUNG MR. JOHN J. JACHYM discovered early yesterday that for his $549,000 investment in 40 percent ownership of the Nats' stock, he had bought the right to two choice seats to the next opening game and could visit spring training camp as the club's guest, if he wished.

He packed his bags within an hour after the annual meeting of the club's stockholders and beat a retreat to his Jamestown, N. Y., home, a disappointed, frustrated young man who in effect had been shown the "this way out" sign by Clark Griffith.

POVICH

He didn't tangle with Mr. Griffith in any showdown stockholders' war because, being a bright sort, he knew that was useless. Griffith, his back up at the sudden intrusion of Jachym as a 40 percent man, was having no part of Jachym as an active partner.

He did toss Jachym a sop in the form of a directorship on the club's board which was voted to his attorney, Frederic Ball, but at the same time Old Hand Griffith expanded the board from four to five, giving himself a 4-to-1 edge on any important issue of policy.

GRIFFITH WASN'T taking kindly to Jachym from the outset, despite all the polite cordiality. The old gentleman who has been the ruling figure in the club for 30 years was hopping mad, not at Jachym personally, but at suddenly finding himself with a new partner. He resented the fact that he had to read the papers to learn who Jachym was and how he had bought in.

Armed with his own 45 percent of the stock and sufficient proxies to give him voting control, Griffith gave Jachym short shrift. His new partner had made it plain that he would accept an important post in the official family, but it was never offered. Jachym, 40 percent stockholder, got the brush so completely that he didn't even get the vacant and salaried job of treasurer, which Griffith tipped toward a 4 percent share owner.

As usual, Griffith dominated the meeting and the Nats' president did not yield an inch to Jachym's hope for an important position. Jachym also learned that he had bought into the club in a year when home attendance was down 20,000, road attendance was 90,000 off, and any dividend would have to be voted out of surplus.

IN THE REBUFF to Jachym, there might have been one significant item. That was Jachym's curt statement that "I will not be active in any capacity in the affairs of the club this year." Special emphasis may be read into his reference to "this year," because Jachym is a forward-looking young man.

He wants into the Washington club eagerly, if not to the point of threatening Griffith's firm control of the firm. He is an energetic young man who promoted $400,000 worth of backing in addition to his own savings and he is not content to sit on his hands and hope to clip coupons on the operation of an eighth-place team. Griffith may have launched a knock-down stockholders' war.

Out of the meeting came one report that Griffith's actual voting control was not large although the Jachym forces were satisfied that it was decisive. Griffith's own attempts to buy up stock have not been heavily successful and even with the proxies he obtained he had a bulge of only a few shares in the voting.

THE REPORT to the stockholders that the team lost $270,000 last season on the operation of its farm system did not abash Jachym, who as assistant farm director for Detroit could understand the Tigers' farm operations cost them $800,000. Jachym has said that he respects Griffith's stewardship of the club, but believes more money could be made with more aggressive operation.

The reluctance of minor stockholders who hold the potential balance of power to sell to either Griffith or Jachym was related by one man who pointed out: "Our shares are mostly hand-me-downs from our families. We keep them for sentimental reasons. But, of course, all stockholders like dividends, too, and they've been pretty nice under Mr. Griffith all these years."

Those dividends Griffith has been paying, and the personal equation between himself and the minor stockholders, are now paying off for the Nats' president. In the only challenge to his dominant position in the last 30 years, he was the winner, proxies down. But the suspicion persists that Jachym has merely gone into a year's training for his next bout at the annual stockholders' meeting, after being flicked off by Griffith like a bit of extraneous matter on the lapel of a new suit.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Clark Griffith's 30-year role as ruling figure of the Washington Baseball club was affirmed again yesterday when he was elected president of the corporation at its best attended annual stockholders' meeting in history.

John J. Jachym, recent 40 percent buyer of the club's stock, who was hopeful of election to an important official post, was given a polite brush-off by Griffith and the other stockholders.

Jachym, the picture of disappointment, returned immediately to his Jamestown, N. Y., home after issuing the following statement: "I will not be active in any capacity in the affairs of the club this year. My Washington attorney, Mr. Frederic J. Ball of Pierson & Ball, will represent my interest on the board of directors."

His statement matched in brevity the curt post-meeting statement of Griffith who announced without comment:

"The stockholders of the Washington Baseball Club at their annual meeting have again elected me as president. I desire to express my heartfelt thanks and deep appreciation of their confidence in me and I want to pledge to them my earnest efforts to always work for their best interests."

The only concession made to Jachym was the election of his attorney, Ball, to the newly created post of assistant secretary of the club, and Ball's appointment to the board of directors, expanded from four to five.

Jachym, when asked if there was any significance in his "this year" reference to his inactivity, said: "I have no further comment. I want to remain friendly with Mr. Griffith."

Griffith's election was unanimous with Jachym joining in the support for the man who has headed the club as president since 1919.

A new figure in the club's operations did emerge from the meeting, however. He is E. Wootton Young, Washington tobacco merchant, who was voted into the vacant office of treasurer and also given a place on the board of directors. Other members of the board in addition to Ball and Young are Griffith, Vice President

Erdelatz Due To Take Navy Job Today

By Whitney Shoemaker

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Naval Academy has beckoned a former subordinate back to Annapolis to consider taking its head football coaching post.

A spokesman confirmed today that Eddie Erdelatz, end coach here for three years, is interested in the berth and will visit the academy tomorrow.

The spokesman also hinted that Navy is interested in Erdelatz as a successor to George Sauer, who resigned last Friday. Sauer quit because his two ranking assistants were to be fired.

"If the situation works amicably, Erdelatz will be signed as head coach," the spokeman said.

Now assistant coach of the professional San Francisco Forty-niners, Erdelatz is due in Annapolis tomorrow morning after flying from California.

Must See Eye to Eye

There are other candidates:

"Numerous applications have been received from professional, college and high school coaches," the spokesman said. "Erdelatz is the first to be brought in for interview in connection with the vacancy."

If the West Coast athlete and the Navy "do not see eye to eye, then we will go ahead and interview other possibilities," he added.

Erdelatz, a veteran of assistant coaching although only 36, trained Middie ends for three seasons. He arrived in 1945 as a lieutenant commander in the Navy, and was generally credited with molding Dick Duden, then a blocking back, into an all-American end.

The next two campaigns saw Navy sink into the football depths from which it threatened to emerge only last season. Erdelatz forsook college football for the professional game when Sauer arrived from Kansas two years ago.

Sauer Wanted Him to Stay

At the time, Erdelatz was among many considered for the top spot as the Navy scrapped its policy of assigning active officers to the academy to coach football.

Sauer urged him to remain and pilot the ends, but Erdelatz chose

Manhattan Beats GW In Garden

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Left-handed hooker Hank Poppe scored 29 points tonight to lead Manhattan College to a 76-64 victory over George Washington University in the opening game of a basketball double-header at Madison Square Garden.

In the nightcap, CCNY nosed out St. John's of Brooklyn, 54-52.

The visiting Colonials from Washington, D. C., trailing 65-42 after eight minutes of the second half, closed with a rush to give the Jaspers a scare.

A consecutive string of 14 points and another of six, both spearheaded by little Gene Witkin and Sam Moffatt, pulled them up to within six points of Manhattan, 70-64, with two minutes left. But time ran out.

It was a close game until the last few minutes of the first half. Trailing 17-11, the Colonials, led by big Ray Adler and Waldo Goglin, pulled even at 24-24 midway in the period and moved in front, 33-32 at the 16 minute mark when Goglin pushed in a neat layup.

With Poppe hitting for three baskets and Jack Byrnes setting up a couple of others, Manhattan spurted for 12 straight points to walk off with a 44-35 half-time lead.

Nats Open School In Florida Today

Winter Garden, Fla., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Washington Nats will open their baseball school here tomorrow, the first of the 1950 season.

Joe Engle, president of the Southern Association Chattanooga Lookouts, and Zinn Beck, Lookout official and Washington scout, will direct the school.

Others who will take part in instruction include George Myatt, Joe Haynes, John Fitzgerald, Sid Hudson, all of the Washington club, and Bobo Newsom of Chattanooga.

Hogan, Fingers Crossed, Begins Comeback Friday in L. A. Open

Los Angeles, Jan. 3 (AP).—Ben Hogan announced today he will start his golfing comeback in the Los Angeles Open, beginning Friday.

The former links master, badly injured in an auto crash 10 months ago, has been playing daily here for five days, reporting a sub-par round of 69 the first day.

Not even Hogan knows whether he will be able to stand up under the four-day, 72-hole grind, the courageous little Texan admitted to sports writers.

But he will have this psychological advantage: He will be playing on the same Riviera course where he won the Los Angeles Open in 1942, '47 and '48.

"It's all a question of my legs," Hogan said earlier. In his practice rounds he has been carrying a chair around with him to rest between holes.

Tatum Sings the Maryland Verse of His Coaching Aria

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., Jan. 3.—Jim Tatum, who three weeks ago said "if Florida University is interested in me, I'm interested in it," sang a different song today.

"If Maryland is happy with me, I'm happy to stay at Maryland," replied the Terps football coach when asked to answer flatly whether he would remain at College Park or shift to Gainesville, Fla.

"I plan to coach football at Maryland for at least three more years," he continued.

"Why three years?"

"I received a 5-year contract in 1948" he said "and it has three more years to run. I intend fulfilling the contract."

Does Tatum's decision to stick by his Maryland contract mean that Florida apparently has lost interest in him?

"I don't know what Florida's interest is in me" he answered. "And I can't say that I have asked to be withdrawn from consideration by Florida because I haven't applied for the job and therefore have never been officially considered.

"When I came to Maryland in 1947 from Oklahoma I said we should have a great football team in 1950 at Maryland. I want to repeat that now. We lose only seven players from this year's squad and have about a dozen top-flight replacements coming up from our freshman. We should have a crackerjack football team at Maryland next season. And it will be a pleasure to be with that squad."

Tatum and his wife remained here while the Gator Bowl champion Terps returned to College Park. The Tatums plan to leave tomorrow morning, driving home leisurely. Jim is to speak at the Washington Touchdown Club banquet Saturday night.

He was awful proud of Maryland's decisive 20-7 victory over Missouri yesterday.

"That's the guttiest squad I've ever coached," he said today. The

Duke Defeats Terps, 58-46

Durham, N. C., Jan. 3 (AP).—Duke's Blue Devils posted their third Southern Conference basketball victory tonight as they got an early jump on the University of Maryland and went on to win, 58-46.

The Blue Devils gave a flat and generally poor performance in both the first 10 and final 10 minutes, but in between they were red hot and poured in 35 points with three veteran seniors leading the way.

Both squads were badly off on their floor game and the Blue Devils led by only 10-6 after eight minutes of play. Then the action speeded up, and Duke went out at halftime with a 28-18 margin.

Ceep Youmans and Hughes paced Duke's scoring with 12 and 11 points, respectively, but top honors went to Maryland's Clarence Brawley, who scored 16 points, 11 of them in the second half.

Caps Lose, 83-79, to Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 3 (Spl.).—Trailing by 17 points in the third quarter, the Washington Caps stormed into the lead late in the fourth period here tonight but bowed to a counter rally by the Rochester Royals, 83 to 79, in a National Basketball Association thriller.

It was Washington's third defeat in as many starts against the Flower City quintet this season. The teams cloud-hopped tonight to Washington, where they tangle at Uline Arena again tomorrow night.

The combined efforts of Bones McKinney, who hammered in ten of 24 shots to account for all but one of his 21 points, and hard-driving Chick Reiser, with 17 counters, were wasted so far as the Caps were concerned.

But the 3988 fans who saw the closest contest of the home season were more than satisfied.

The victory was Rochester's fifteenth in 15 home games, and the team's eighth straight in over-all league play.

The Caps trailed, 24 to 18, at the quarter, and 48 to 40 at halftime. Entering the final frame they were on the wrong end of a 68-58 count, but their sustained rally put them on top with only five minutes left.

Bob Feerick's three-point play and Reiser's driving layup shot erased the Rochester lead.

Hoyas Hobble Home After Loss In Sun Bowl

After a rough 8-hour plane trip from El Paso, Tex., Georgetown's Hoyas arrived in town at 9:45 last night.

The dejected team was not physically perfect by any means. Center Vic. Banonis was suffering from a pulled back muscle, End Bob Noppinger was sporting a prizewinning shiner and Tackle Gene Stack required a cane to walk on a badly wrenched knee.

The Hoyas, after suffering a 33-20 loss to Texas Western in Monday's Sun Bowl in El Paso, did not arrive all decked out in cowboy regalia, as was originally planned.

Terp Gator Rooters Miss the Plane

The Maryland football squad and the student body got their signals mixed yesterday.

The football squad, victorious over Missouri in the 'Gator Bowl, 20-7, flew back from Florida. Students sped from College Park to the National Airport to greet the team. The 40-car caravan arrived shortly before 5 p. m., when the plane had been scheduled to arrive.

But the airliner had arrived at 4:30 p. m., and the team boarded a bus for College Park.

Sooners Angling For Irish Game

Great Bend, Kans., Jan. 3 (AP).—The Great Bend Tribune reported today that University of Oklahoma athletic officials are trying to juggle football schedules so as to play Notre Dame at an early date.

The newspaper said this information came from an "unimpeachable Big Seven source." The newspaper quoted its Big Seven source as saying he understood his own school recently received a request from Oklahoma to shift football dates in order to try to squeeze in a game with Notre Dame.

St. Johns Wins 6th Straight

St. John's Cadets continued their winning ways by scoring a 52-46 victory over the Eastern Ramblers yesterday on the losers' court.

It was the sixth straight win for the Cadets, who have yet to lose.

St. John's won the game handily, boasting a 31-9 margin at one time in the second quarter. The Cadets held period leads of 12-5, 35-17 and 39-30.

Ramblers Franny (P. A.) Dyer and Jim O'Donnell tied for the game's high scoring honors, each netting 12 points. Bob MacDonald paced the winners with 11 points.

Caps Scrap With Rochester Again Tonight at Uline Arena

For the second night in a row the Rochester Royals, leaders of the National Basketball Association's central division, will provide opposition for Washington's Caps tonight in an 8:30 game at Uline Arena.

It's the second local invasion this season of the Royals, who played host to the Caps in Rochester last night. In the last Uline Arena clash, the Royals walked off with an 36-84 victory.

Many of Washington hopes tonight will center around Leo Katkaveck, two-time North Carolina State captain, who has performed brilliantly of late and seems to operate especially well against the Royals.

The Capitols will be shooting for their fourth consecutive victory on the home floor tonight, having defeated Boston, Syracuse and New York in their last three starts here.

The invaders will again feature one of pro basketball's greatest offensive stars and an old Washington jinx in Forward Bob Davies, who is pacing his team's scoring with an average of 13.5 points

Arnie Risen, Bob Wanzer, Jack Coleman, Bill Calhoun, Arne Johnson, Red Holzman, Ed Mikan, Fran Curran, Andy Duncan and Frank Saul complete Rochester's squad.

Mika, a brother of the Minneapolis Lakers' Ed Mikan, will be making his first start locally with the Royals against the Caps.

Jack Nichols, the big center, is averaging 14.4 points per game for the Caps and Freddie Scolari, is hitting 13.1.

In a Catholic Youth Organization opening attraction starting at 7:30 tonight St. Anthony's will oppose St. Teresa's.

Quantico Rally Tops Patuxent

Quantico, Va., Jan. 3.—The Quantico Marines erased a second-period Patuxent River Naval Base lead and went on to defeat the Sailors, 63-50, in a Potomac River Naval Command League game here tonight.

It was the seventh win without a loss in the league for the Marines.

Patuxent held a slim 23-22 lead with less than two minutes remaining in the first half. Frank Uhrig tapped in a field goal for Quantico to give the Marines a 24-23 lead that they never lost.

"I find I can't use these. Would you please give them to the brokest schoolteacher you can find?"

Jersey May Force Revision of Maryland Racing Schedule

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

Down New Orleans way there's a new hero of the turf—Don Coventry. This horse who seemed destined to a life of plugging around in cheap claiming company hit his stride with the opening of the Fair Grounds and on the holiday program the other day won his ninth straight race. While the field didn't include any Capots, Ponders or Palestinians, it was the day's feature event which shows Don Coventry has made a lot of progress of late. His handlers don't know how good the horse is at this time. They plan to continue to get him better and better opposition. Who knows? He might end up winning a Dixie Handicap or a Santa Anita Handicap. Which reminds me that some years back, a horse named Quiz Kid won eight in a row and was finally stopped at Charles Town by a maiden colt dubbed Walter Haight.—Bill.

3 Tracks Conflict With Garden State

Baltimore, Jan. 3 (AP).—Rather than buck competition from New Jersey, Maryland probably will revise its entire 1950 racing season schedule.

New Jersey dates announced today are in conflict with tentative dates allotted Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Laurel in Maryland.

When the Maryland Racing Commission outlined the date schedule last month, Chairman H. Courtenay Jenifer made it clear that track heads would be authorized to seek revisions if New Jersey opposition developed.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, president of Havre de Grace, said his track definitely will seek a revision of its April 8-May 6 session.

A spokesman for the Maryland Jockey Club, operator of Pimlico and Laurel, said every effort will be made to get dates providing less opposition with Jersey.

Garden State Park in New Jersey has been assigned April 27 to May 30 in the spring and October 3 to November 4 in the fall.

Pimlico would buck Garden State throughout its entire spring meeting of May 8 to 20, but the fall meeting, Nov. 1-15, would be largely unaffected.

Laurel's Sept. 30-Oct. 28 meeting would be in conflict throughout with Garden State.

Reckord, in commenting on New Jersey's action remarked:

"Apparently they are not thinking about anybody but themselves.

"I had hoped we would be able to work out an equitable program with the two States cooperating."

"Presumably so it will get more Saturdays into its schedule."

Other dates allocated to New Jersey pari-mutuel race tracks by the commssion follow:

Monmouth Park Jockey Club (Oceanport)—June 16 to August 9 (47 days).

Atlantic City Racing Association—August 10 to September 30 (45 days).

Freehold Racing Association (trotting)—August 10 to September 9 (24 days).

In another final round of the tournament, Merrick Boys' Club won from Nye House, 25-21, for the 80-pound title. Earl Harrell of Nye House scored 18 points to take the game's high scoring honors. Gene Roberts was high for the winners with 10 points.

Hine Wins, 41-31

Hine Junior High scored its fifth win in nine starts, 41-31, over the Roosevelt junior varsity yesterday at Hine. The winner's Bob Jackley was the games' high scorer with 14 points.

Cauliflowers vs. Crumpets

Pip, Pip and Tallyho—Lovely Laverne Baxter Entertains Lord Carlton at Turner's Tonight

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

UNITED NATIONS Lend Lease and Marshall Plan to the contrary, United States-British relations probably will be set back a couple of decades tonight. Although we'd rather have a lovely bunch of coconuts, our English cousins have sent us, of all things, a wrestler.

Carlton
HIS LORDSHIP

As if we didn't have our fill, what with such as Ungorgeous George, Mr. America, Carnera, the Angel and others haunting our dreams, Great Britain injects us with one Lord Carlton.

Now don't get me wrong, I have nothing against His Lordship and I won't allow myself to believe the rumor that he's not British at all, but a native of Brooklyn who never was any closer to the Isles than eating an English walnut or dodging an English sparrow.

I shudder at the thought of what awaits him at Turner's Arena tonight.

IN THEIR DAY the English have met and conquered headhunters, cannibals — everything that flies, swims, walks or crawls.

But they haven't seen anything yet. Just wait until Lord Carlton meets Laverne Baxter.

Although the match is still 24 hours away, I can hear Baxter muttering, "Fee, fi, fo, fum—I smell the blood of an Englishman."

Now if this were a 1950 version of the Battle of Bunker Hill, I'd be satisfied to have Lovely Laverne on our side, but tonight, Josephine, he ain't going to be no cementer of friendly International relations, if you know what I mean.

According to Dave (Press agent) Herman, Lord Carlton will enter the ring with more accessories than you had to buy with your '49 car—top hat, inverness cape, cane and monocle, plus his faithful valet, Sir James Hartley, who (and I'm still quoting Herman) will be prepared to serve tea.

All that, and Laverne Baxter, too—heaven forbid!

WHEN BAXTER GETS one good look at that hokus pokus he'll be hot enough to boil over Sir James' teapot.

HIS LARDSHIP

Of course, Laverne could counter by going formal and wearing his upper plate into the ring, but he's been gumming guys so long he might be at a disadvantage.

I wonder if Lord Carlton knows how Baxter lost those teeth. I'm told he was wrestling a little, slippery fellow one night and became so enraged at being unable to catch the guy that he pulled his teeth out one by one and threw them at him.

Rugged mortal, I say old chap.

Waldorf, Celeri Defend Center Who Made Fatal Low Pass

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 3 (AP).—Twenty-one years after Roy Riegels ran the wrong way, Rose Bowl gridiron fates have dealt harshly with another California center.

Sophomore Charley Harris' low pass with about two minutes left to play was blamed by some observers for California's 17-14 defeat by Ohio State yesterday. Bob Celeri, back to punt, juggled the ball, ran clear across the field and finally kicked left footed—10 yards and out of bounds on California's 13.

Four plays later Jim Hague booted the field goal that gave Ohio State the game.

California Coach Lynn Waldorf, however, refused to let Harris shoulder the blame.

"We had to use Charley after George Stathakis, our offensive regular center, was hurt in the first half. But you can't criticize the boy. He's been a fine center all year, and that could happen to anybody. Celeri himself told me that he should have handled that ball."

Celeri added to newsmen:

"It was a 50-50 chance. It was maybe mostly my fault."

Either way, it was another tough break for the Bears, who never will forget the 1929 game when Riegels raced 60 yards with a fumble toward his own goal, finally to be tackled by a teammate on his own 2. A blocked punt then gave Georgia Tech an 8-7 victory.

Tatum Stays At Maryland

Boston University game made us. You remember, we had to come from behind in the last quarter to win and we marched 80 yards with that ball. That proved to me we had a good football team. I wish we could have played Oklahoma yesterday. We'd have given them a helluva ball game."

IN SHORT—Center Jim Brasher stayed behind to join forces with the northern squad for Saturday's Senior Bowl game here. Charlie Justice and party of 28 other seniors arrived today for Saturday's big blowout. 'Gator Bowl officials are blaming the Seniors' Bowl for the attendance decline at yesterday's game. Only an estimated 25,000 saw the Terps win. Quarterback Stan Lavine wanted to permit Maryland's senior end and captain, Fred Davis, to score a touchdown so badly yesterday that he wanted to move into the backfield in the last few minutes, but Tatum vetoed the idea . . . Better conditioning paid off for the Terps. They were brought down here to win a football game and were on a strict training routine while Missouri, which has yet to win a bowl game, took it easy, both here and at Fort Lauderdale.

to return to him home town and join the Forty-ners' staff.

The chance to relocate in Annapolis with a promotion to head man developed when Sauer quit after two seasons with three victories, a pair of ties and 13 defeats.

Sauer quit when the academy declined to retain Line Coach Bob Ingalls and Backfield Coach Vic Bradford for another year. They had been together four seasons, and Sauer refused to break up the team.

Erdelatz, a huge fellow who starred as a football end and heavyweight boxer at St. Mary's College from 1932 to 1934, had been a football assistant at both St. Mary's and San Francisco before the war. He returned to inactive duty as a lieutenant commander during his coaching trick at Annapolis.

Meanwhile, Sauer remained at his home in a suburb of Annapolis. He said he plans to "sit tight" before attending a meeting of the Football Coaches Association in New York.

Jachym Gets Brush-Off At Nats' Meeting

Calvin Griffith and Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr.

Mr. Young, long-time crony of Griffith, is the largest of the minor stockholders, controlling more than 800 shares and traditionally votes with Griffith.

The meeting produced no showdown of opposing interests and consumed only 40 minutes. Griffith went into it armed with his own 45 percent holdings plus sufficient proxies to assure him voting control.

Sixteen stockholders were present in anticipation of what might have been a Griffith-Jachym conflict that did not develop. Customarily, only 8 or 10 shareholders have attended the annual meetings.

Apparently aware that he could be outvoted on any issue Jachym himself nominated the board of directors and his nominations were accepted without disagreement. Before the meeting, the holdover three-man board had agreed with the Jachym forces on the makeup of the new five-man directorship.

Eynon Gets New Post

In the minor reshuffling of the club's officers, Eynon who formerly held the office of secretary, kept that post and was named to the new office of assistant treasurer.

It was not disclosed whether Mr. Young would succeed to the $10,000 salary as treasurer formerly drawn by William E. Richardson, whose 40 percent holdings were bought by Jachym.

The directors announced after the meeting that a stock dividend would be declared, but did not fix the sum. It was said the amount would not be decided for several days.

Griffith's report to the stockholders was brief. "We'll have a better club than last year, and I have great confidence in Bucky Harris as our manager," he said. He emphasized that the losses of $270,000 in the operation of the farm system had cut deeply into the club's profits.

Hyattsville, Bladensburg Win Games

Bladensburg and Hyattsville scored victories in the opening basketball double-header of the Prince Georges County League before 1000 fans last night at College Park.

In the first game, Bladensburg defeated Mount Rainier, 48-31. Bob Foreman and George Clayton scored 12 points apiece to set the scoring pace for the Blades. Ken Moffett, with seven points, was high for the losers.

Hyattsville had little trouble in registering a 48-30 win over Maryland Park in the nightcap. Bobby Leaman scored 13 points to take high scoring honors for Hyattsville. Ralph Morrow scored 11 points to pace Maryland Park.

Big U. S. Employe Issues In Congress: Longevity, Economy, Retirement

Economy, retirement and longevity—they loom as the major Federal employe issues in the congressional session that got under way yesterday.

But only on longevity has there been any clear-cut action. Chairman Murray of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee and several other members of his committee yesterday put in bills to permit rural carriers to count all of their service toward longevity raises. Murray also will sponsor a bill to allow postal custodial workers to count all Federal service since 1933 toward the longevity raises.

Meantime, groups of Federal workers outside the classified and postal systems are pushing for longevity promotions, pay raises above the grade maximums based on years of service. A bill to include classified employes in the upper brackets in the longevity system also will be proposed.

Members of Congress were vague on the economy and retirement issues. Everyone wants economy in Government but very few people can agree on a practicable way to reduce Federal expenditures.

As the session wears on, Congress is sure to threaten to abolish tens of thousands of Federal jobs. In past years the threats were made but when the showdown came very few actual reductions were ordered by Congress. The record shows that the President has made the big reductions. This year it could be different.

If the budget is lumped into a single bill as is now planned, any number of agencies could get badly hurt—unless the President is given "item" veto power, the authority to veto one or more provisions in the bill without killing the entire measure.

A dozen members of Congress report they are interested in amending the Civil Service retirement system to provide additional benefits to Federal workers and their families. However, each talked about different bills, for lowering the retirement age to 65; to increase the pensions of retired people, and to reduce the 6 percent employe deduction for retirement.

Chairman Johnston (D., S. C.) won't call a meeting of his Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee until the three vacancies on it are filled. If another Democratic seat is added, the assignment will go to either Benton (D., Conn.) or Lehman (D., N. Y.). Darby (R., Kan.) is a good bet for a GOP vacancy.

Johnston is drafting bills to give full credit for past service to all postal employes toward longevity promotions. He also wants to see a general reclassification of postal salaries.

NOTES: George Adams has retired as assistant general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau. He was in charge of legislation and rulings . . . Thomas A. Riviere has been awarded the Army's commendation for meritorious service for his civilian work in the Signal Corps. During the war he handled Army communications for Yalta, Potsdam, and Quebec conferences . . . Fifty-eight percent of all Government men have veterans' preference . . . A total of 368 persons passed the recent Civil Service test for boiler firemen.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce an examination soon for economist to fill jobs here. Starting salaries will range from $3825 to $6400. Applicants wil be rated on education and experience. Five to seven years of general economic experience, including from one to two years of specialized experience, will be required to compete in the tests.

At Fort Meade, Md., these examinations are open: Sheet metal worker, $1.21 to $1.71 an hour; painter, $1.30 to $1.58; insect and rodent controller, $1.21 to $1.47; refrigeration and air conditioning mechanic, $1.21 to $1.47; sludge wagon driver, $1.12 to $1.36, and oiler, $1.12 to $1.36. The board of Civil Service examiners at the fort also will accept applications for supervising office appliance repairman, $3400 a year, until further notice.

Transit Head Visions U. S. Subsidy as 'Possibility'

Merrill Says Firm Might 'Some Day' Ask Congressional Aid In Meeting Costs

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A Congressional subsidy for the Capital Transit Co. yesterday was suggested as a "remote possibility" to meet some future "bumps" in the operational cost of the District's public transportation system.

The suggestion was advanced by Capital Transit Co. President E. D. Merrill following a luncheon meeting of the American Automobile Association's D. C. Advisory Board. Subsidies for private automobiles in the form of parking facilities were discussed at the luncheon.

Merrill pointed out that such subsidies, either through off-street parking facilities, or wider streets, are "the most extravagant use of available street space."

"Why should private automobiles be subsidized, when the most economical form of transportation must go on its own?" Merrill asked reporters. He pointed out that the automobile users "expect help from the public authority."

"Something to Consider"

He described a future request for congressional subsidy for Capital Transit as a "possible measure of relief—something we have to consider."

Merrill emphasized that the subsidy proposal was still in the discussion stage. "But we might get another bump in increased costs. Right now we need something to support our present operation. We might have to help to take care of any further increased costs."

If, in the future, the company should apply for a congressional subsidy, Merrill said it might take the form of an appeal for decreased taxation on plant and income.

Alternatively, he said, the company might ask Congress to raise the 3-cent statutory ceiling on transportation of school children.

Rate Request Unaffected

Merrill said the subsidy plan, if the Capital Transit Co. should decide to ask for it, would have no bearing on the transit company's proposal to ask for another fare increase in the near future.

He said he did not know when the transit company will present its new request for a fare increase to the District Public Utilities Commission. He discounted reports the request might be presented this week. He said company officials "have not fully made up our minds" as to the exact amount of the fare increase. "The range is very wide," he said.

Merrill's statement to reporters followed a luncheon address by Stedman T. Hitchcock, secretary of the Parking Project Committee of the Highway Research Board, who pointed out the slight change in parking facilities available in downtown Washington within the past 20 years.

Elected School Board Urged In Falls Church

The Falls Church Charter Commission last night "strongly" recommended to the city council that it provide an elective school board under the new city charter.

In earlier drafts, however, the commission gave council alternative proposals for an elected or an appointed board. The present board is appointed by council, a system the University of Virginia's Bureau of Public Administration recommended for continuance.

The nine-member charter commission, headed by Franklin Thackrey, officially presented its 97-page charter draft to the council in a joint meeting at the city hall. Council members have been studying a mimeographed version of the charter draft since last Tuesday.

In a supplementary report submitted to the council yesterday along with the charter draft, the commission recommended that the school board be virtually independent of the city manager.

Earlier proposals gave the manager "considerable control over financial affairs and administration of the school system."

Cut Manager's Authority

Proposed changes in the original draft would allow the school board to submit its own operational and capital improvement budgets directly to city council, and would cut the manager's projected authority to alter the school board budget before council receives it.

In another appendix to its preliminary recommendations, the commission suggested an indefinite rather than a two-year term for the council-appointed manager.

Walter Reed Building

Rep. Frances Bolton (R., Ohio) yesterday introduced a bill to grant $350,000 to draw plans for an armed forces institute of pathology building at Walter Reed Hospital. The fund would replace an existing $600,000 grant for planning a pathology building to be located at Forest Glen, Md.

Locked From Bedroom by Wife, Oldster Says, And She Wouldn't Cook—He Seeks Divorce

Samuel B. and Irene Stebbins pose for pictures but ignore each other. He wants a divorce

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A 75-year-old retired motorman yesterday accused his 49-year-old wife of refusing to cook his meals in the daytime and of locking him out of her bedroom at night.

The septuagenarian who on the District Court witness stand denied he had any "shortcomings" as a husband is Samuel A. Stebbins, of 5426 MacArthur blvd, nw. He seeks a limited divorce from his third wife, Mrs. Irene B. Stebbins, who after four years of estrangement still lives in his home.

They married on October 20, 1945, and less than three months thereafter Stebbins said he was through. It wasn't long before Mrs. Stebbins began locking him out, and in the meantime, he said he learned to know he wanted no more of the marriage.

He said that she offered to "sell" herself to him for $50 a night and went to bed in the nude. She made indecent gestures at him, he testified, and said it was more than he could stand.

"She caused me to be a nervous wreck," Stebbins said. "She didn't dress properly in the house. She's a nudist. She don't sleep with anything on. And once she pulled up her clothes at me—."

The matronly Mrs. Stebbins appeared shocked at all this. She is to get on the witness stand today to give her version of life with a man 26 years her senior.

In answering his suit which seeks a limited divorce on the grounds of cruelty, she denied his charge that she remains with him in the hope that he will die and that she will inherit his $17,500 home.

She said that she wants to remain with Stebbins lest in his physical and mental condition he "be taken advantage of by any unscrupulous persons. . . ."

Stebbins was certain the marital split-up was not his fault.

"I gave her a clean bed, a warm home and good food," he said.

He couldn't recall any recent occasions when he gave his wife any money but said she never asked for any.

According to Stebbins, he cooked the meals in his house only because Mrs. Stebbins refused to do it for him. He denied he insisted she eat stew three days running.

He said that for two years, she kept her bedroom locked. Once, he said, she threw a cup of water through the transom at him. Once, he admitted, he got up on a chair to throw a pan of cold water at her through the same transom.

13 Hurt in Downtown Crash Of CTC Bus, Truck and Taxi

Thirteen persons were injured shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday when a bus, a truck and a taxicab collided at 14th and H sts. ne.

Police said a Capital Transit bus, with 50 pasengers aboard, was headed east on H st., and was in collision with a Washington Gas Light Co. truck. A cab ran into the rear of the bus after the impact, police said.

Of the 13 injured, only one, James Williams, 24, of 1104 6th st. nw., who was on the truck, was admitted to Casualty Hospital. He suffered lacerations of the leg. The others were treated at the hospital and released.

Bus passengers treated were Rosie Lee Allen, 12, and Pearl Lee Allen, 11, both of 5301 Hay st. ne.; Oscar P. Holland, 35, of 2016 Maryland ave. ne.; Sylvia Only, 4, of 1410 1st. st. sw.; Mary Jones, 30, of 426 21st st. ne.; Joanne McLoyd, 15, of 513 58th st. ne.; Broadie Rush, 43, of 426 60th st. ne., and Morris Poole, of 217 8th st. se.

Also treated were two men who were on the truck, Charles Crisp, 35, of 1810 California st. nw., and Richard Brooks, 25, of Landover, Md., and the driver of the cab, Donald Norris, 30, of 1116 Penn st. ne., and his passenger, Murray Herron, 32, of Burke Station, Va.

Police identified the driver of the bus as William S. Spencer, 33, of 1667 Fort Dupont pl. se., and the driver of the truck as Charles E. Smith, 34, of RFD No. 2, Upper Marlboro, Md.

William Durant, 13, was the victim of a hit-and-run driver last night when he was struck as he crossed the street in front of his home at 1208 6th st. nw.

He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg. Two companions who saw the accident told police a dark sedan struck the boy, slowed down momentarily, then sped away.

Rider Fatally Hurt In Two-Truck Crash

A Bowie, Md., man was fatally injured at 2:30 p. m. yesterday when the truck in which he was a passenger collided with a second truck on Crain hwy., near Defense hwy., just over the Anne Arundel County line.

The victim was Frederick Nicholson, 59, of Bowie.

One truck, police said, was operated by Harry N. Robinson, 43, of Bowie. He was headed north. The other truck, traveling south, was driven by Linwood Stallings of Kingston, N. C., according to police.

Frederick Nicholson, who was riding in Robinson's truck, was rushed to Anne Arundel General Hospital at Annapolis by the Bowie rescue squad. Nicholson, who suffered deep lacerations of the throat, died at 3:30 p. m.

Arlington Fire Truck Damaged in Collision

An Arlington fire truck en route to a grocery store fire early yesterday collided with an automobile at Lee hwy. and N. Highland st., Arlington.

Police said the ladder truck, from the Clarendon firehouse, was damaged to the extent of $1500.

Driven by Charles W. Theodore of 1600 N. 16th st., Arlington, the truck was en route to a fire at the Frozen Food Fair at 4038 Lee hwy. Firemen said the store's whole stockroom was destroyed.

The driver of the car, Drexal B. Mason, 31, of 2416 N. Madison rd., Arlington, told police he didn't see the fire truck until it was out on the highway.

District Sailor Hurt When Bus Overturns

Frank H. Norman, 24, a sailor whose home is at 1273 Oates st. ne., was injured yesterday when a bus in which he was riding over turned near Portsmouth, Va., killing a woman waiting for another bus.

Norman and another sailor, the only persons injured among the 29 passengers in their Norfolk-bound Greyhound bus, were admitted to the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth, where their condition was reported as satisfactory.

Hyattsville Policeman Draws Suspension in Arrest Attempt

Police Pvt. Thomas R. Bladen, 32, has been suspended for 13 days, effective last Saturday, as a result of an attempted arrest of a motorist December 30, Hyattsville Police Chief Howard H. Holmes disclosed last night.

Bladen, who lives at 4801 48th ave., Edmonston, failed to report the incident to police authorities and failed to report for duty the next day, Holmes said.

Bladen, while off duty and in plain clothes in his own car, chased the motorist whose car had cut his off sharply, about a mile to Berwyn, outside the policeman's jurisdiction, the chief said.

The motorist first tried to run Bladen down, hit him on the head with a flashlight, then drove off according to Bladen.

Chief Holmes disclosed the suspension to a reporter at a meeting of the Hyattsville City Council. The incident was not brought up at the meeting at which the council:

Approved rezoning from residential to commercial of a lot adjacent to the postoffice for use as a 20-car parking lot. The petition of Lowndes Wells must be approved now by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Voted to borrow $30,000 at 3 percent from the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. to reimburse the general fund for payments to contractors for street improvements most of which have been completed.

Court Awards 2 Children to Mrs. Kearney

A mother who is not "ideal" may yet be better for her young sons than an "affectionate" stranger, Judge Jennings Bailey of the District Court said yesterday.

Because of this, Michael Kearney, 9, and his 6-year-old brother, Philip, were ordered turned over to their mother, Mrs. Wandajune Kearney, 33, of 1445 Ogden st. nw. The father, who by the decree lost the boys is Michael M. Kearney, 36, a $7000-a-year lawyer.

They were married in 1938, while Kearney was in law school at Georgetown University. She was a Government clerk who now is a $3225-a-year interviewer with the Federal Security Agency.

She admitted that less than a year after the younger boy was born she left her husband, saying that his beatings and drinking compelled her to do so.

Between 1944 and March, 1949, she remained away from the sons who were placed with a Silver Spring, Md., family. Mrs. Kearney said she often saw the boys from a distance.

In summarizing the case, Judge Bailey said:

"It seems that the wife, when she left her two small children with her husband for the reason given by her that he would not support her and them, did not exhibit that degree of affection that mothers usually have for their children.

"On the other hand," the children are not living with their father. It is true that they are well-cared for and looked after by a woman who has an affection for them; but they are not living with either of their own parents.

"A child needs care and association of its own parents. Living apart from them, a child is exposed to humiliation and embarrassment at school and wth its associates.

"So while in this case, it does not appear that the mother is an ideal mother, neither does the father appear to be an ideal father.

"I find, therefore, that it will be better for the mother to have custody of the children and it will be so ordered."

Trial Is Ordered In $180,000 Suit Over '44 Eviction

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday sent back to District Court for trial the $180,000 damage suit brought by a man who claimed he was wrongfully evicted from his home here "in the pouring rain."

He is Titus deBobula, who protested his ouster from 1230 16th st. nw., in 1944 as against the law.

District Court had decided the case without trial on the ground that there were no "material issues of fact." The Appeals Court said that this was wrong, and ordered trial.

The defendants are Mrs. Helen Macondray and her daughter, Mrs. Mary Lord A. Coppedge of Seminary Hills, Md.

D. C. Expected to Get 12 Million U. S. Fund; Mental Care Probed

Sen. Neely Projects Hospital Inquiry; Is Told Aged Are Rated Insane Cases

Senator Matthew M. Neely, chairman of the Senate District Committee, told his first press conference of the session yesterday that he intends to start an "inquiry" into the District's mental hospital facilities.

St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, the mental ward at Gallinger Hospital, and the District Training School for Feeble Minded would be included in his inquiry, he said.

Neely said his informant whom he declined to identify, told him that 200 to 300 elderly persons who are not mentally ill have been committed to District mental institutions.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths, said last month that at least 200 aged inmates there could be released if suitable outside nursing facilities were available.

The Senator also said he was "very much interested in the alleged shortage of school facilities here.

"Undoubtedly," he added, "some improvement is needed."

He said he was concerned with the success of his bill to establish a human rights commission for the District.

But on the question of home rule, he declared:

"Of course, I am extremely interested in self-government for the District, but there's not much we (his committee) can do until the House acts."

The Kefauver bill, providing for a council-manager form of government, has passed the Senate, but is now sidetracked in the House.

Senator Neely said he would ask to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee which is considering his joint resolution giving the District the vote for the Presidency and representation in Congress.

Some Grumbling

New Look In Capitol Makes Hit

Except for scattered grumblings, the refurbished halls of Congress—sporting new roofs, tapestry walls, new lighting and acoustics—seemed to make a big initial hit among legislators yesterday.

Most outspoken dissenter was Representative James G. Fulton (R., Pa.) who rose to say:

"The new decorations bring the chamber about up to the level of the average movie house . . . but the seats are as hard as they've ever been.

"I've been sitting here for five years on these same board seats, and certainly we people who were not precushioned should have had some consideration." Fulton weighs in at 150 pounds.

Representative J. Harry McGregor (R., Ohio) hopped to his feet to reassure Fulton that new cushioned seats for all House members undoubtedly would be installed next summer when the second half of the four-million-dollar renovations will be undertaken.

In the Senate chamber, where a rich gold brocade cloth covers the gallery walls, there were no floor speeches for or against the "new look," but corridor comment was overwhelmingly on the favorable side.

Chef's Death Probed by D. C. Detectives

Washington homicide detectives yesterday stepped into the investigation of the death of Rene Marchal, former Mayflower Hotel chef.

On the basis of evidence available it appeared likely they would recommend that a verdict of accidental death be returned.

Marchal, 39-year-old French-born chef, vanished from Hains Point the night of November 17. His body was found Monday in the Potomac River, about a mile and a half below Blue Plains.

Athough the body was recovered in waters of Prince Georges County, Md., it was agreed that Metropolitan Police homicide detectives would investigate the death inasmuch as it is believed that Marchal went into the river here.

On the basis of what Washington detectives find, Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, will issue a certificate on how the chef met his death.

Park police are aiding in the investigation because Hains Point is within their jurisdiction.

Park police disclosed that a bank book found on the body showed Marchal had made a $50 deposit the day before his disappearance.

They said also that a letter found in the dashboard compartment of his car last November was from a girl in Germany who said she could not marry him. Marchal was a prisoner of war in Germany during World War II.

Marchal was last seen on the November night after his car had rammed into a lamp post on Hains Point. Two Park policemen found him sitting in his car, dazed. He disappeared while they were inspecting the damage to the lamp post.

Hench Condemns Reports Against Cortisone Drug

Dr. Philip S. Hench, codiscoverer of cortisone, miracle drug for arthritis, last night publicly condemned recent reports of its dire effects.

Cortisone, he said, does not cause insanity, nor does it cause diabetes. But it may be a research tool in further studies of both conditions, he added.

He spoke here at the Hotel Mayflower at the kickoff luncheon of the D. C. chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation for its fund raising campaign for $50,000 to help fight rheumatic ills.

Supplies of cortisone, painstakingly extracted from ox bile, are still "pitiably small, even for medical research," he said.

Jasper Legion Unit To Hear O. C. Holleran

Owen C. Holleran, national executive committeman, District of Columbia Department, American Legion, will be the principal speaker tonight at a national security and foreign relations program sponsored by the Sergeant Jasper Unit at 8 p. m. in the American Legion Club, 2437 15th st. nw.

Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, auxiliary department chairman of the program, also will speak. Mrs. Ola D. Lee, unit committee chairman, will preside.

Man Indicted on Charge Of Bilking Would-Be Tenants

A man charged with posing as a landlord and apartment house operator for the purpose of fleecing prospective tenants on rent advances yesterday was indicted on a total of 40 counts of false pretenses and larceny. Altogether, 79 indictments were returned yesterday by the grand jury.

The "landlord," Thomas M. Frey, 52, of 1230 G st. rw., was accused, in five separate indictments, of bilking house-hunters of more than $2700 in 1948 and 1949.

Lila M. Stewart, 34, of 23 K st. ne., was indicted on 18 counts of forging and uttering Government checks totaling more than $500. Robert O. Woodhouse, 44, also of the K st. address, was indicted on two counts of aiding and abetting the alleged forgery.

Joseph J. Miles, 52, of 6723 Roosevelt ave., Seat Pleasant, Md., was indicted on three counts of making false statements to the Government in connection with an application for a job as a Library of Congress guard in July, 1948.

Robert W. Dorsey, 21, of 1106 3d st. sw., was indicted on a charge of first-degree murder in the death of his estranged wife Yvonne, 19, last December 7.

Nine persons were indicted on charges of promoting a numbers game. They were:

Lawrence Accarino, 55, of 1310 Downing pl. ne.; Willie J. Hackett, 23, of 2809 Fitch st. ne.; Wallace W. Beach, 38, of 1321 M st. nw.; Helen Wood, 33, of 1206 3d st. sw.; Winston Sims, 49, of 2315 Champlain st. nw.; Ben Hillman, 50, same address; Lucy Brown, 28, of 2378 Champlain st.; Rudolph Sullivan, 34 of 408 Eastern ave. ne.; and George Taylor, 54, of 503 New Jersey ave. nw.

Accarino beat a numbers rap last November when the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia held that the action of police in battering down the door of his apartment to enter without a warrant was illegal.

Mildred J. Agee, 46, of 1316 5th st. nw. was charged with performing an abortion that proved fatal and two men were indicted under Public Law 615 on charges of taking "indecent liberties" with girls, 6 and 7 years old, respectively.

Pembrook Byrd, 33, of 123 F st. nw., was charged with molesting an 8-year-old girl at the home of his mother. Raymond Hall, 43, of 467 I st. nw., was charged with molesting a 6-year-old girl who lived at the same address.

John H. Smith, 49, of 3410 17th st. nw., a food store employe, was indicted for bigamy. According to police, Smith married Mrs. Lillian D. Brubaker, 3624 Connecticut ave. nw., a divorcee, March 5, 1949, although Smith had never secured a divorce from his first wife, Mrs. May Bruce Winstead Smith of Mount Rainier, Md.

House Leaders See Payments Continued Under New Omnibus Appropriations Bill

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

House leaders predicted yesterday the Federal payment to the District will probably be maintained at the present level of 12 million dollars a year.

The predictions were made after House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) announced that the District budget will be treated as part of the omnibus appropriation bill being planned for the first time this year to cover all Federal operations.

Previously, the District's annual budget has been covered in its own separate appropriation bill. Leaders of the committee voiced belief that the "one-package" appropriation plan will not in itself produce a cut in the Federal payment to the District.

New Executive Unit

At the same time, Cannon disclosed plans for setting up a new executive committee within the appropriations committee to try to effect a balanced Federal budget and make a start at reduction of the national debt.

Cannon said the eight-member executive group, to be drawn entirely from the Appropriations Committee membership, will be appointed within the next month.

Their job, he said, will be to review the appropriation proposals prepared by the existing appropriations subcommittees for duplication and overlapping and for the total spending involved. If the spending total exceeds revenues, Cannon said, it is expected that the executive committee will send the proposals back to the subcommittees with an urgent request to make cuts.

Named Soon

Cannon said the budget-balancing executive committee will be named a month or so after the subcommittees get to work.

On the District phase of the budget, Cannon emphasized that the appropriation is always in a different category from the appropriations for Federal departments.

McCormack Indorses D. C. Home Rule

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) last night voiced strong indorsement of Washington home rule and proposed at the same time the District be given two non-voting delegates in the House.

McCormack told a reporter "I'm absolutely in favor of legislation that will give the District home rule. I've also felt for many years that there should be two delegates elected to represent the people of the District in the House.

"If we can't have two delegates, I'd be for one," he said.

"The idea of a nonvoting delegate for the District is not a part of the bill on which action is now being sought by Washington groups.

McCormack's comment came at the close of a day in which Washington organizations had sent an estimated 100 persons to the Capitol to urge support for speedy House action on the Senate-approved home-rule bill. The measure now is stuck in the District Committee of the House.

First-day progress was slow. Sponsors of the drive said about 10 House members signed and about 40 more promised to sign the petition that could force the bill out of committee and present it to a vote of the House.

Thus about 60 signatures were reported on the petition, 40 more regarded as likely to go on it this week, with 218 needed to get the bill out of committee and to a House vote.

District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) indicated he has no present plan for any further committee action on the bill. The measure was tabled by the committee last year.

Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery, Falls Church, Va.

Mr. Mitchell, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. Henry A. Berliner, at 2841 Tilden st. nw., started the magazine wth a 6-page issue published on January 6, 1894, of which 50,000 copies were printed. He wrote the entire contents himself in longhand.

He retired in 1936, when the biweekly magazine's circulation had risen to a million copies.

Took Global Trip

About 1888, before founding the magazine, Mr. Mitchell had taken a 35,000-mile trip around the world, partly on a bicycle, and equipped with one of the Eastman Kodak Co.'s earliest cameras.

Mr. Mitchell used the camera, a gift of the company, to take thousands of scenes in the countries he visited. His trip and the photographs were publicized by the Kodak company to promote the early model camera he used.

A native of Tioga County, Pa., he came to Washington about 1886 with his father, Senator John Inscoe Mitchell of Pennsylvania, who later became a judge on the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. He died in 1907.

Mr. Mitchell was a stenographer for the Senate for seven years.

Led Magazine 42 years

From Pathfinder's beginning, he guided the magazine for 42 years, working long hours and writing most of the editorials.

Aside from his work on the magazine, Mr. Mitchell played the piano, cello, violin and bass in amateur groups here, and painted both oil and water color landscapes.

Besides his daughter, he is survived by a stepsister, Mrs. Samuel Clyde of Swarthmore, Pa., three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His wife, Mrs. Wilhelmina Mitchell, died in 1947.

'Aunt Jemima', Stage, Film Star, Dies in Ambulance

New York, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—Tess Gardella, who became famous as the chuckling, roly-poly "Aunt Jemima" of stage and radio, died today in an ambulance en route to a hospital. She was 52.

Aunt Jemima

The 400-pound black-face singer collapsed in Grand Central Station last Friday just before leaving for weekend singing dates in Connecticut, but continued her trip and sang as scheduled.

Early today, she lapsed into a diabetic coma and her two sisters called an ambulance. It took several extra policemen to get her into the ambulance because of her weight. She died en route.

Miss Gardella, who loved the pancakes she helped to advertise for years, had been forced to quit eating them in recent years because of her diabetic condition and overweight.

She went into show business when she was only 16, capitalizing on her size, which usually ranged from 300 to 400 pounds. She created the role of "Queenie" in Show Boat, and danced and sang in many musical revues, including "The Follies" and "The Scandals." Recently she had appeared in films, nightclubs and on television.

What Refreshments to Serve for Evening Party

I expect to have a couple of small parties, groups in for an evening of bridge and cocktails. Could you advise me as to what would be appropriate refreshments?

Hot canapes make very nice cocktail accompaniments this time of the year. For instance, very tiny hot baking powder biscuits into which has been popped an equally tiny piece of ham or a bit of Smithfield ham spread, are delicious. For ease in serving, the biscuits can be made, cut and placed on baking pans in the refrigerator before the guests arrive. Bake them—a few at a time—so they come out of the oven to be served piping hot.

With hot ham biscuits you could serve Roquefort stuffed celery. To prepare it, use ¼ pound Roquefort cheese, 1 tablespoon ketchup, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon salt and a dash each of cayenne and sugar. Fill celery stalk with mixture and cut into inch lengths.

Cucumber cheese slices are a festive appetizer. To make them use 1 medium sized cucumber, 2 packages cream cheese, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, ¼ cup chopped green pepper, paprika, salt, pepper, and Worcestershire sauce. Cut cucumber in half crosswise, pare and remove seeds, leaving center hollow. Sprinkle salt around inside; drain before filling. Mix together cheese, onion, green pepper and add enough paprika to make a reddish color. Season with salt, pepper and a few drops Worcestershire sauce; pack firmly into cucumber shells. Place in refrigerator to chill. Just before serving, cut in slices ¼ inch thick.

Add to this crispy potato chips, salted nuts and some thin slices of your favorite fruit cake and you will have delightful evening refreshments.

Can you tell me if there is any place in or about Washington that carries Scandinavian imports (food)? I would like very much to get some sil, lingonberries, Swedish red beans and hardtak. I'm also trying to find where I can get skins for making potato sausage. Is there a Swedish bakery in Washington? If not, do you know of a recipe for limpa? A. G.

There is a delicatessen in the 800 block of 11th st. which specializes in Scandinavian foods. They have sil, lingonberries, Swedish red beans, hardtak, flour to make limpa. The very accommodating proprietor of the shop can probably tell you how to make limpa or put you in touch with someone who can. They do not sell skins for making sausages, but skins can be ordered from a large mail order company. For any additional information about Scandinavian foods, I suggest you call this store at Metropolitan 8020.

Will you kindly tell me the difference between the habits of silverfish and moths? Eating seasons? Insecticides or methods of eliminating? J. M.

Most people are familiar with the appearance of the clothes moth in both its larvae and adult stage, but not everyone knows for sure what a silverfish is. In a bulletin on "Silverfish," E. A. Bock, principal entomologist, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, describes them this way. "Silverfish are slender, wingless, scale-covered insects, slightly more than three-eighths of an inch long with three long tail-like appendages at the hind end of the body, and with two long, slender feelers at the head end. They are nocturnal, hiding during the daytime and are not often seen except when objects are moved. They then dart suddenly from recesses thus exposed and glide quickly out of sight."

Silverfish prefer vegetable foods which have a high starch or sugar content such as bookbindings, paste in wallpaper, thin rayons. They have been known to ruin such fabrics as wedding veils, starched clothing, and lace curtains when these have been stored without adequate protection.

Moths, on the other hand, eat woolens, furs, feathers, hair and fabrics made of these materials.

Neither are limited by seasons now that houses are heated the year around.

The eradication of silverfish is particularly difficult because they can subsist for so long without food. Adults have been kept alive without food for 319 days. Of course, while they fast they do no damage, but as long as they live they are potential destroyers.

Best results in ridding a house of silverfish can be obtained by killing them where they are apt to develop in large numbers. This could be in damp, dark rooms, basements or attics. They crawl up water pipes from basement to upper floors. Using a 5 percent DDT spray, go over baseboards, door and window casings and closets where pipes go through walls or floors. The DDT will leave a deposit which will kill for several months.

Moth larvae (the destructive stage) may be found in cracks in floor and baseboards of clothes closets. They are found principally in closets, drawers or chests where they can get appropriate food to feed upon. Spraying such clothes containers and clothes with 5 percent DDT solution and sealing stored clothes after spraying into tight boxes or bags is the best preventive.

Will you please tell me how to remove the remains of an ink stain on a bedspread? It is made of heavy unbleached cotton material and the tufting matches the material; it is a deep cream. About a year ago I spilled two spots of ink on the spread and immediately sponged them with water, removing all but a light stain, which was not too noticeable since it was partially under some of the tufting, but when the spread was washed the stains spread and made more spots where the stain touched other parts of the spread. The stain is lavender in color, but the ink was either blue or black. N. R. O.

You should be able to remove the stains quite easily with a household bleach. Stretch the stained area over a large bowl or basin which is filled with water and drop the bleach onto it. Use a bleach which is diluted with water, one part bleach to two parts water. Let act a minute or two and immerse stain in water to stop bleach action. Repeat until stain is removed. If stain is not on the tufting, apply bleach from the wrong side of the spread.

When stains are all gone, rinse three times to remove all traces of bleach. When using a bleach it is always wise to test the effect of the concentration on the color of the fabric at an inconspicuous spot before putting it on the stain.

Avoiding Grown-up Monopoly

Bill Brown's dad is the "life of the party" whenever any of Bill's pals are around the house. He has a fund of good stories, a keen sense of humor and he talks the kids' language.

Nancy Conover's mother is charming. Whenever Nancy's friends—boys or girls—come to see her, you can be sure that they'll cluster around Mrs. Conover.

Lately, both Mr. Brown and Mrs. Conover have been wondering why Bill and Nancy haven't had their friends around so often.

In all probability, both these youngsters have mixed feelings about their parents' popularity. Of course, they're proud that the other youngsters like them. At the same time, however, they have found themselves shoved into the background whenever Pop Brown or Mrs. C. "took over." The boys seemed more interested in Nancy's mother than they were in her. And often, though Bill's friends had come over to hear some of his new records, they spent all the time kidding with Mr. Brown.

While it's an excellent thing to be able to be on a friendly basis with our own youngsters' friends, we should avoid monopolizing their time and attention even when they seem to enjoy it. If we don't, we're competing in a sense with our own youngsters and not giving them the chance to grow increasingly in social adjustment.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Ailing Since Childhood With Heart Disorder, Woman Finally Loses Symptoms During Analysis, But Her Crush on Specialist Vexes Her Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: From childhood my wife had a functional heart disorder which no doctor seemed able to cure. A few years ago she finally resorted to psychoanalysis and claims she is no longer in distress.

She says she never felt better in her life and she certainly looks well, but the part that greatly disturbs us (her family and me) is that she has changed greatly toward her home, her children and me. She is no longer interested in any of us; she is only interested in the analyst, and keeps calling him continually.

She seems so dependent upon the analyst that a friend of hers suggested that she go to someone else if anything troubled her. She has told this friend she has fallen in love with the analyst and that she is so grateful for his helping her, after so many years of suffering.

Man Is Trying to Understand

I TRY to be patient with her, for I can understand that she would be grateful for being cured; and also I have been told that this so-called idolization of the analyst wears away as the patient becomes more adjusted. But with Alice it is becoming progressively worse, and thus is a serious problem which, I am beginning to fear, may break up our home.

We always had an extremely happy home life, are well regarded as an ideal family, and nothing has been too good for my wife. I would do anything in the world for her and the children. I suggested a change of surroundings for her—when I was given a chance to transfer to another city where my firm has a plant,—but Alice said she didn't want to move and wouldn't go if I took the job. What can be done to save the situation before it is too late?

S. P.

Wife's Infatuation Is Another Symptom

DEAR S. P.: People are beginning to learn from psychiatry and psychoanalysis that many supposedly dangerous symptoms of physical distress—such as uneasy heart action, for instance—have their roots in the unconscious, in morbidly anxious emotional states. Such appears to have been the case with your wife.

Figuratively speaking, Alice is a refugee from chronic anxiety; and in the analyst's company and personality she feels as if she had found sanctuary at long last, where protective patience, comprehension and compassion (qualities of "perfect love") are in endless supply. Thus her longstanding symptoms of heart disorder subside, and at that point she seems willing to drop her pursuit of health, in favor of leaning parasitically upon the analyst's care forever after, provided she can perpetuate that arrangement which makes her passively comfortable.

In the analytic relationship she is the center of attention during interviews, a situation that temporarily satisfies her infantile craving for presumably omniscient assurance that "all's well;" and in between sessions she is always harking back, both in fantasy and telephone calls, to the comfort of the doctor's "interest." And she calls this dependency attachment "being in love," when it means rather that she feels helpless to deal with oppressive dangers feared on the unconscious level, and seeks a romantic route of deliverance from them—along the lines of the Cinderella story.

Man Is Adopting a Distorted View

IN THE MANY years that Alice suffered from a functional heart disorder, I am sure her husband and family never felt that the various doctors who couldn't relieve it were to blame for her worsening symptoms, which finally goaded her to try analytic therapy. Now it has been established that the core of her trouble is emotional, not physical (yet), Alice is blindly refusing to cooperate in a scientific effort to correct the real difficulty; and if she were not being a special burden to the analyst at this time, she might have arrived at a hysteric state of invalidism on your hands.

Morbid anxiety such as hers always worsens as time goes on, unless the patient acts wisely and diligently to weed it out,—so don't aggravate the trouble unnecessarily by thinking, foolishly, that either analysis or the analyst are a "threat" to an erstwhile ideal marriage or blissful home life. If the marriage fails, the seeds of destruction were in the relationship, not picked up recently in a hygienist's office. In my opinion, the best way to cope with Alice in her present state is to take your complaints to her analyst and let him guide you.

Frost in Air Peps Up Hunger For Hot Soup

As soon as there's a touch of frost in the air, there's a hunger for hot soup. Not just a thin bouillon, either. For a quick, filling chowder for the children's lunch, you might try this corn chowder made with evaporated milk.

Corn Chowder

3 tablespoons finely cut onion
1 tablespoon shortening
1½ cups potatoes, pared and diced
1½ cups water
1¾ cups corn (canned, cream style)
1½ cups evaporated milk
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains of pepper

Cook slowly for 5 minutes the finely cut onions in the shortening. Add pared, diced potatoes and water. Cover and boil for 20 minutes, or until potatoes are tender. Add and heat thoroughly the corn and evaporated milk. Season with salt and pepper. Serve piping hot with crackers.

This recipe serves four persons.

Cooking Cues

Add chopped Brazil nuts to a bread stuffing for poultry to make it company fare.

Fill a sponge cake ring with whipped flavored gelatin and fruit and garnish with whipped cream for a party dessert.

Youngsters like chopped salted peanuts added to raisin-oatmeal cookies.

Add sliced dates to vanilla or chocolate pudding for a nutritious dessert.

MRS. DAVID LLOYD, LOUISA AND ANDY

Mrs. Lloyd, whose dual career as lawyer and department store executive must fit into her program as housewife and mother, gets a special pleasure out of family shopping tours. While supplying the children's needs, she has an opportunity to keep an eye on the business in which she has a big stake.

Women at Work

'Big Business' Fits Her Like a Glove

By Peggy Preston

A slender, soft-spoken Alexandria housewife heads one of Northern Virginia's largest business enterprises.

She is Mrs. David Lloyd, who is first a wife and mother; then lawyer and civic leader. In her spare time she serves as president of the board of a consumer-owned department store, only two years old, which now does nearly a million dollars' worth of business a year.

Originally called the Edward A. Filene Cooperative of Virginia, the organization is known officially—as of January 1—as the Shirlington Cooperative Department Store. First of two such projects, it alone can boast of having a woman at its helm.

Mild mannered and retiring, Mrs. Lloyd belies the popular concept of the "big business" woman. She practices the art of cooking with the same care she gives to her law work. And her meticulous interest in home and family is only repeated in her serious devotion to the affairs of the "cooperative," which she considers one of the finest community projects with which she has even been associated.

Success Seems Sure Thing

RIGHT NOW Mrs. Lloyd is in the happy position of an executive whose business is prospering. Success seems assured for the enterprise which is, in effect, the property of more than 300 citizen stockholders of Northern Virginia.

Having watched the project get off to a flying start in March, 1948, then waver precariously for a time, Mrs. Lloyd is doubly pleased at its recent comeback. Sales picked up sharply during 1949, showing a 35.7 per cent increase from March through October as compared with the same period in 1948. Dollar volume in September jumped 80 percent ahead of the same month last year, while October sales reported 63 percent larger.

All this encouraging data Mrs. Lloyd has at the tip of her tongue, ready to spring on any prospective stockholder.

"The more shareholders we have, the stronger we will be, and the greater will be the benefit to the community as a whole," she explains. As a means to furthering this aim, she plans an intensive membership drive this month. Citizen volunteers will canvass the area in an effort to sell common stock and boost the shareholders list.

When the number of local shareholders is sufficiently high, the cooperative can hope to win complete independence from its father organization, the Consumer Distribution Corp. of New York. This is the concern, founded by the late Edward A. Filene of Boston, which holds the preferred stock and attends to the merchandising of the Shirlington store.

Neighborhood Women Help

MRS. LLOYD and members of her all-male board depend on neighborhood women for aid in forming policy opinions. A consumers' committee, made up of 10 women, one from each of the adjacent residential areas, relay to the board the assorted advice, criticisms and suggestions of members of the community.

"We are guided by what the people want," says Mrs. Lloyd. "And particularly by what the women want—for the homemakers are the most powerful buying force in our community."

Mrs. Lloyd, wife of a member of the White House staff, is the mother of two small youngsters, Andy, 6, and Louisa, who is 2. The family resides in a pretty, comfortable house in Alexandria, just 1½ miles from the Shirlington store, where she makes a point of doing all of her shopping.

Until a few years ago Mrs. Lloyd, a graduate of Columbia University Law School in New York, practiced her chosen profession on a full time basis.

Keep in Trim

Eat Three Meals a Day, Lose Pounds Each Week

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BULK of overweights, ever hopeful of losing pounds, or at least in holding their own, restrict calories along a favored line . . . the line of least resistance.

Cheerfully they give up potatoes and skimp on breakfast. Then happily they substitute more fattening foods for the ones left out, reasoning, "I didn't eat potatoes, so I can have the chocolate cake." Naturally such calorie juggling is far from reducing . . . quite the opposite when 100 calories in a potato are replaced by a conservative 300 in cake.

Oddly enough, such "dieters" never seem to doubt their method. They go along, determinedly giving up calories here and doubling them there . . . gaining nothing but weight.

If that's your general idea of "diet," and you've been practicing that ruse for years, then blaming the added pounds on birthdays or glands, why not try something new? Science has found a system by which you can eat three meals a day and lose 2 pounds a week without going hungry.

SINCE foods are fattening in direct proportion to the number of calories they contain, and fats head the list of high calorie foods, start there. Fats are more than twice as fattening as any other food you can eat—including potatoes. Before you cut into a piece of meat—broiled of course, for frying adds fat calories—trim off the fat part. With the fat part trimmed, you can reduce twice as fast . . . provided of course you don't take gravy, for that's fat again at a calorie cost of 100 per tablespoon.

Substitute more protein for part of the fats trimmed off and that is really putting the science of nutrition to work, for protein speeds up the burning of calories. Have an egg at breakfast; cheese, lean meat, soup made with milk, or another egg at lunch; and fish, lean meat or fowl at dinner. Have plenty of vegetables, but avoid cream sauces and go light on butter.

SUBSTITUTE fruit for rich desserts and you can save calories and bolster the vitamins . . . and slim down beautifully. The scientific system works!

Your Baby and Mine

Thumb-Sucking Furor Is Over

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THE furor about thumb-sucking has come to a peaceful end. Because more is known about the genesis of this habit, it is plain that if the child is not thwarted in his desire to suck, the habit runs its course in due time.

It is the things parents do to end the habit which keep it flourishing long beyond the time when the child's need for sucking has passed.

For it has been confirmed that babies have definite sucking needs. Sometimes these are not satisfied because the breast is too free-flowing and the baby gets its nourishment in a short time. Or, bottle-feedings come at too long intervals and the baby has to piece out its sucking needs with a thumb, or blanket or kimona sleeve in its mouth.

Soothing and Satisfying to Baby

Because sucking is soothing to the baby and is associated with the intake of food, babies tend to suck their thumbs when going to sleep. Any habit connected with sleepy time becomes fixed and hard to eradicate.

When the child is tense and unhappy, has been scolded or shamed, a thumb is a ready comforter and it goes in his mouth until he has again become at ease and peaceful.

When the mother uses forceful methods to deprive the baby of its thumb or harsh methods of punishment, then the thumb becomes doubly important and the child's pride in outwitting his mother is allied to his desire to suck.

The use of splints is cruel and useless. Bitter medicines can be sucked off blithely—and are. All the methods people have devised have been successful in isolated cases, though less drastic methods might be, too.

Teeth Will Not Suffer Permanently

Parents worry about thumb-sucking because it may seem that the child's upper teeth begin to show a tendency to protrude. Authorities who have done exhaustive research on this subject assure parents that if the child's nutrition is such that his bones are firm, the protrusion will correct itself when the child stops sucking.

We all know children with mal-occluded teeth who have never had any sucking habits, and children who have been chronic thumb-suckers with good teeth. It depends on many factors, good nutrition, the way the child sucks a thumb, gently or vigorously, and the pattern of mouth and teeth the child inherits.

If we would allow small babies the privilege of sucking their thumbs without interference, we might not have any long-time thumb-suckers to worry about.

It's Navy Blue Again for Spring

Navy blue for spring has always been a great American tradition, but it looks as if it will break all records this year. And since so many of our navy fashions are spiked with white, it looks younger and fresher than ever.

You may start your navy wardrobe with a navy fleece coat—cashmere if you want a really beautiful fabric. Your suit may be either a patterned worsted in navy, or plain navy gabardine. Old fashioned navy serge is back again in the smartest navy wool dresses, and for dress-up, you will want a navy taffeta dress or a navy silk surah suit.

'Senate's First Lady' at Opening

By Marie McNair

THE First Lady in the Senate Gallery yesterday was the Vice President's bride, Mrs. Alben Barkley. Wearing a trim black suit and a tiny white hat with a black veil, Mrs. Barkley watched the Senate's reconvening ceremony with interest.

With her in the Executive Gallery's front row were the Vice President's daughters, Mrs. Max Truitt in a black suit and green hat and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, wearing black, too, with a green-blue scarf tucked in at the neckline. Mrs. Clark Clifford, wife of the Presidential Counsel, and her mother, Mrs. Daniel Kimball, were also in Mrs. Barkley's party

Across the aisle in the private gallery were row upon row of Senate wives. Mrs. Robert Taft, a late arrival, finding no vacant seat, moved in with Mrs. Clifford.

Many in Gallery Bring Along Guests

MRS. WALTER GEORGE brought along Mrs. Whiting Wicker, the former Mary Senate George, and Mrs. Max Gardner, visiting here from North Carolina. Mrs. Homer Ferguson's guest was Mrs. Anne Archbold and next to her was Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall.

The glare of the new overhead lights in the Senate chamber caused Mrs. Ferguson to remark to Mrs. Saltonstall, "It's good our husbands have hair, because if they sit there long they'll probably get sunburned."

Veep and Bride Lunch in Party

MRS. ANDREW SCHOEPPEL, wife of the Kansas Senator; Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, Mrs. Tom Connally and Mrs. James Kem sat side by side. And later Mrs. Saltonstall, Mrs. Alexander Smith and Mrs. John J. Williams lunched together in the Senate dining room. Senator Ferguson and Senator George Aiken joined Mrs. Ferguson, while Senator and Mrs. Wayne Morse lunched "a deux."

The Vice President joined Mrs. Barkley and his family for luncheon with the Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle in his private dining room. The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet were guests and others were Mr. Truitt, Mr. MacArthur, former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner.

DATE-BOOK DATA: Vice President Barkley and his bride will be honor guests at a reception to be held at the Women's National Democratic Club on Monday, February 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Burton have issued cards for a cocktail party on January 12 from 6 to 8 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirk will give a buffet supper on Saturday evening in their apartment at the Westchester.

The Charge d'Affaires of Pakistan, M. O. A. Baig, will give a reception on January 5 from 6 to 8 p. m. in honor of Sir Zafrulla Khan, Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

Sumner Welles Attends Son's Nuptial

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, attended the wedding on January 2 of his son, Arnold Welles, and Miss Marianna Ledbetter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Ledbetter of Savannah, Ga.

The ceremony, which was performed by a Justice of the Peace in nearby Ridgeland, S. C., was originally set for Charleston, S. C., in early January.

After the surprise ceremony, the couple had luncheon with the wedding party and then left for a short wedding trip. They will make their home in Washington.

The bride made her debut two years ago. The bridegroom was graduated from Yale in 1940 and served as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve during the war. He and Adele Harman Welles were divorced recently.

WITH so many women on hand to applaud their menfolk, the opening of Congress yesterday had its social as well as its political side. Four of the prettiest feminine spectators were claimed by Harry Darby, freshmen Senator from Kansas. The quartet of his daughters included (left-right) Mrs. Ray Evans, Mrs. Roy Edwards, jr., Mrs. Thomas Gibson, jr., and Miss Marjorie Darby.

Congressman's Daughter Is Engaged

Representative and Mrs. Hamilton C. Jones of Charlotte, N. C., and Washington, D. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Alice McAden, to Howard Clinton Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Noble of Hartford, Conn. The wedding will take place in late April.

The bride-elect, who made her debut in 1946, was graduated last June from the University of North Carolina where she was a member of Chi Omega Sorority.

Also she attended St. Mary's Preparatory School in Raleigh and Finch Junior College. Mr. Noble, a former Army Air Corps pilot, was graduated from Wilbraham Academy and Lehigh University.

Jeweler's Dream Girl

If Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend, Baby Princess Yasmin's a Social Success

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SOME TIME before the happy event, the Aga Khan announced he intended to present his daughter-in-law, Rita Hayworth, with diamonds equal to the birth weight of her expected baby.

After Princess Yasmin's advent—and, incidentally, after hearing Carol Channing sing "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend"—we began to wonder about this lavish gesture. Weighing-in, of course, is old-hat to the Aga Khan, who each year steps publicly on scales and is presented by loyal subjects with gold equal to his avoirdupois. On the fiftieth anniversary of his assuming spiritual leadership, we believe, the Aga Khan received poundage in diamonds.

But even a 5½-pound baby must cost a pretty penny in diamonds. Inquiry at Galt's, the Washington jeweler, after some understandable delay to permit complex calculations, elicited the information that the tiny princess' weight at birth was approximately equal to 12,475 carats.

A 1-carat diamond of finest quality, minus the 20 percent Federal tax, costs about $1250. Multiplying this by 12,475 adds up to the juicy total of $15,593,750!

But next came the catch! Naturally, there's no telling what size or quality stones the Aga Khan plans to pass on to the princess. Bigger stones cost more, while inferior quality lessens value. Perhaps the Aga Khan might cut corners, use industrial diamonds!

Simplest solution would be for him to dish out 5½ of the 265-plus pounds of sparklers accumulated at his own weiging-in! Anyway, Princess Yasmin's sure going to have lots of friends!

Santa Works Fast—Via Mail

THIS chronicler's Yule column consisted of various celebrities' replies to an inquiry into what they most wanted for Christmas. The answers ran considerable gamut. Jack Logan, for instance, asked for a wife.

Two days later, the first tentative nibble—a letter—was forwarded to bachelor Logan through us. It was penned by a spinster (or so her printed stationery indicated) from Wellesley, Mass. It read as follows:

"If you want a wife for Christmas, and I am hoping to find a husband, maybe we should get together, by mail anyway. Sincerely, Miss Blank. P. S. Maybe we are too critical about such things."

Mr. Logan's reactions to the letter were first startled, then enthusiastic. Other billet-doux are drifting in and before this gets out of depth, the whole problem will be placed under the sympathetic supervision of Mary Haworth.

Social Notes From All Over

THE indomitable Mrs. Fred Witt, whose cheerful presence is very much missed in Washington, writes from Johannesburg, South Africa, where her husband is en poste with our embassy:

"Can you imagine having Christmas in the middle of summer? The weather here is sweltering and the peaches, plums and apricots are ripe on our trees—and the cucumbers and watermelons I planted have oodles of little fellows on their vines—basking under the summer sun."

Then Gretchen dips into the domestic scene: "I like the natives—no one else does—think I am crazy to say I like them—but more eager workers and helpers I have never had in my employ than these two we have—cook and house and garden boy—cost—one gets £7 a month, room, board and clothes and the other 8. Only—will I be lazy when I return!"

Enclosed with the letter is a clipping from the social page of the Johannesburg Rand Daily Mail. The column recounts that: "Between 60 and 70 women spent a happy morning on Tuesday at tea with Mrs. Frederick William Witt, who had invited them to meet Miss Dorothy Stirling, sister of the High Commissioner for Australia. Pink is Mrs. Witt's favorite color, and predominated in the lovely flowers in huge vases and in rose bowls on the tables."

Mrs. Witt confides that flowers—5 dozen dahlias, 8 dozen magnificent pink roses and 6 dozen pink carnations—cost 10 American bucks—of £3/10. It sounds pretty ideal yet Gretchen concludes: "But little ole Washington is my idea of a nice place—!"

Here's Lowdown on Hormones

WHAT do you know about hormones? Practically nothing, we'll bet. Neither did we until we started reading Nina Katherine Lunn's book (to be published January 19) titled "Physical Attraction and Your Hormones."

Blonde, lovely Mrs. Lunn, stepdaughter of former Senator Wallace H. White of Maine, superficially seems the most improbable person to author a serious, medical book. But she has—and it took five years to complete.

During this span, in addition to a tremendous amount of background research, she read over 500 medical journals dealing with glands, innumerable medical reports and every available book on endocrinology.

The manuscript was checked by several distinguished endocrinologists and continuously revised to keep it up to date during preparation. Dr. Morris Fishbein has written the foreword and concludes: "The book is authentic and provides much information that everyone ought to have about glands."

Mrs. Truman to Launch Tea Series

MRS. TRUMAN will return to Washington from Independence, Mo., at the end of the week, and Miss Margaret Truman has already returned to New York. The First Lady's first entertaining in 1950 will be a series of teas, on January 10 and 12 at Blair House. Guests will be received on these days in two groups, one at 4 p. m. and one at 5 p. m.

Wives of the members of Congress and wives of the Little Cabinet and other Government officials will attend the forthcoming parties. Because Blair House is small, only ladies are invited, with guest lists limited to 100 at a time. A second series of four teas will be scheduled later.

The luncheon launching the twentieth annual campaign of the National Symphony Orchestra, to be held in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel on January 10, will be attended by Mrs. Truman. A tea in honor of Mrs. Truman will be given on Monday, January 16, by the executive board of the University Women's Club, in the clubhouse, 1515 New Hampshire ave., between 4 and 6 p. m.

No definite dates have been set by Mrs. Truman for entertaining the Vice President and Mrs. Barkley, but it was stated at the White House press conference yesterday by Mrs. Helm, White House secretary, that the First Lady is believed to be planning a series of small dinners at Blair House.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

CUSTOMARY booking procedure, reversed in the Neptune Room for 1949, returns with the Carl Horvath trio which comes in this Saturday for four weeks. Night club and restaurant managers don't like to keep one group much over three months. They become old stuff; there's no variety and no news in them.

RITA ANNE

But the Bill Thompson trio have been in the Neptune Room for 12 months—from January to January—and for an equally hard-headed reason. Business in the Neptune Room has more than flourished since they came, while most restaurants last year were having a tough time of it.

Bill Thompson, his pianist Red Moran and drummer Bucky Lawson have a sophisticated interpretation of songs, helped by Red's colorful piano on off beats and melodies and Bucky's occasional outbursts on the drums.

Last March, the other member of this pleasing combination came in: Rita Anne Artiste, from New York. A svelte, dark model, she has an unusually intensive musical background and does an excellent job of improving on popular themes.

Romance has reigned in the Neptune Room this year, with Red Moran married last March to a Ceres girl, and Rita Ann and Bucky planning to do the same thing this month.

Bucky will continue with the Bill Thompson Trio, which goes into the Colonial Hotel in Hagerstown, Md., on January 9. Rita is giving up her night club work and will concentrate on modeling for a while. She expects to commute to New York about three times a week for fashion appointments.

Later, after Bucky and Rita are married, they plan to open a music studio here. Bucky, who comes from Mount Rainier, wants to stay in Washington, and Rita has always planned to make this her home. "I like the people in Washington," she says. "They're just plain regular folks, they're not stuffy, not artificial, not superficial." She will teach piano, vibraharp and organ and Bucky will take care of the drum department.

Moscow Eggs Were High In Every Sense of Word

By Nicha Souré

MRS. WALTER CRONKITE can't complain about the price of eggs in America for she recalls the time she paid a dollar an egg in Moscow where her husband was manager of the United Press for two years. The price was not an indication of its succulency, either, she adds, since she "couldn't stay in the same room with the egg."

The guest speaker at the meeting of Delta Gamma International Fraternity, Washington Alumnae chapter, last night, Mrs. Cronkite told of her experiences of keeping house in Moscow in 1947 and '48.

The dessert meeting of the alumnae chapter was held at the home of Mrs. Wilbur L. Gray, 2129 Bancroft pl. nw.

Business Outlook

Unions, Business Join Forces In Plea to Raise U. S. Pensions

By J. A. Livingston

"We've got to realize," said grandpa, "that there's many a slip between a worker and his old-age pension. Just because Bethlehem Steel signs a contract with United Steelworkers guaranteeing a payment of $100 a month after 65, it doesnt follow that everybody who works for Bethlehem is going to get $100 a month. No sir."

Granpa called for a refill, took a sip, then went on: "I'll bet most people don't know that to get the $100 a month pension, you've got to work for Bethlehem for 25 years. Well, how many workers are going to be in any one company that long? To be eligible for any pension, you've got to be with the company 15 years."

Livingston

"But, after all, grandpa," I expostulated, "everyone realizes you can't get a pension unless you've been with a company for a while."

"Bah!" Grandpa got out of his chair, began pacing the room, and shouted, "That's not the way this pension deal was announced by Philip Murray. No sir. He made it seem as if every member of the union would be fixed for life after 65.

"The steel companies are just as guilty as Murray," declared grandpa, "in letting the workers think they're going to get something that most of them aren't going to get. If a worker leaves Bethlehem, or U. S. Steel, or some other steel company, he kisses his pension goodby.

"Suppose he's laid off. Or suppose the company fails? What are his rights? Seems to me," said grandpa, "this country still has a lot of hard thinking to do about pensions.

"ANOTHER THING. I'm not at all sure that pension plans which require a worker to stay with the company are sound for the country. If the worker has a vested interest in the pension, if he can take his rights with him, that's different. An expanding, changing society like ours needs industrial mobility, not stay-puttism.

"People are slow enough about moving anyway," continued grandpa. "A man and a woman get settled in a town or city; they make friends; their children go to school, and make friends. Well, naturally, they don't want to move. Look what happened in New England during the depression when textile mills closed down. The work disappeared, but the people stayed on. People have to get terribly desperate, like the Okies, before they pull up stakes.

"And now we've added another reason for not moving," persisted grandpa. "We say to workers, in effect, 'If you move, you lose your pension claim.' Most workers already are deterred from moving by their seniority rights. They don't want to leave a plant because in a new company they'll be laid off first."

GRANDPA LOOKED to see if anyone wanted to say anything. Obviously, he had the floor to himself, and he went on: "We can't afford to freeze men in their jobs by penalizing them for leaving. A man ought to want to shift about. Otherwise he'll never discover what he is best suited for. And unless he finds work he likes, he'll never utilize his skills most efficiently, he'll never become a happy citizen.

"And industry needs mobile people too. You have declining industries and expanding industries. You want workers to be willing to quit an industry that's on the skids and to move into one that's progressing. That's the only way a nation can utilize its labor force efficiently."

"I suppose that means Federal pensions," I suggested timidly.

"You're on the track," said grandpa. "At least if you have a Federal system, then once a man has pension protection, he's protected regardless of where he goes. And don't be surprised if that's what comes out of this," said grandpa, shaking his finger.

"After all, as Federal benefits go up, the benefits Bethlehem, Ford, and United States Steel must pay go down. Their pension costs will decrease accordingly. So my bet is that more and more businessmen, like Charles E. Wilson of General Motors, are going to support higher social security pensions.

"Maybe," said grandpa, as if in afterthought, that was what Phil Murray and Walter Reuther were after all along."

READ
"THIS I REMEMBER"
by Eleanor Roosevelt

What would you do if you were a shy, retiring person, suddenly thrust into the spotlight of public life?

Could you learn to meet world-famous people — and win their friendship?

Could you rear your children under conditions that gave them too many privileges on one hand, and too much criticism on the other?

Could you develop a way to live peaceably with a matriarchal mother-in-law?

Eleanor Roosevelt faced these and similar difficult problems. She tells about them in "This I Remember" with chapters that reveal F. D. R. and the Roosevelt family as no outsider could ever have seen them!

By S. Oliver Goodman

Opening of an office in Silver Spring, Md., was anounced yesterday by Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, members of the New York Stock Exchange. The office, in the Bank of Silver Spring Building at 8701 Georgia ave., will be managed by Richard B. Winder.

Prior to entering military service, Winder was a partner in Henderson-Winder Co., Washington investment house, for some 20 years. He served for five years in the U. S. Air Forces as a lieutenant colonel in World War II. In the First World War he was an ensign in the Navy.

Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath was established in 1930. The firm has branches in New York, Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre and Baltimore. In addition to the New York Stock Exchange, the house is a member of the Washington Stock Exchange, the New York Curb, the Philadelphia-Baltimore Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade and other commodity markets.

LOADINGS OFF: The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported its freight traffic dropped 13 percent in 1949. About a third of the decline was attributed to the strikes and work curtailments in coal and steel. The B. & O. moved 2,754,182 cars of revenue freight in 1949. This was made up of 1,764,320 it loaded on its own lines and 989,862 received from other carriers. In 1948 it moved 3,292,095 with about the same ratio—two cars it loaded itself for each one received from other railroads.

One on the Aisle—

Jane's Remarkably Scarce in 'Outlaw'

By Richard L. Coe

"THE OUTLAW" seems to me no worse than many movies and, in its bizarre way, far more entertaining than several expensive lemons.

That Roman numeral copyright mark, which always gives the impression that a movie is at least somewhat high-toned, ends in XLI, which seems to translate into '41. Since "The Outlaw" and its publicity have been with us since time immemorial, the fact that Jane Russell is in it can surprise no one.

Miss Russell has since given us other, dressier, examples of her art. In all, it was obvious that while she is rich in nature, she is a pauper in art.

One was not prepared, however, for the comparatively brief scenes entrusted to her in this essay on Billy the Kid. I had the idea that she was in almost every scene and that young Billy was mad about her..

But like the bear in James Thurber's fable, Billy could take her or leave her alone. True, her wiles get him into serious james, and though it's carfully inserted that they're married and the picture ends with them riding off into a hopeful future, her influence over him seems subtly maternal.

For the Billy whom Howard Hughes gives us in the person of the weakly handsome Jack Beutel borders on the Jukes tribe, of which careful observation convinces one there are more members than contemplation makes pleasant. This doe-eyed moron speaks in monosyllables, respects only force and seems more like the slight adolescent of the legend than the traditional Hollywood type Robert Taylor made of him.

By far more important to Billy's life is the tough hombre played by Walter Huston. That hearty actor is giving one of those sly, amusing portraits of which he is a master. As Doc Holliday, he forms a curious friendship with Billy, who discovers he's the only person in the world who won't kill just to get his way.

Throughout all these scenes flows some rather surprising background music—most of it Tschaikovsky's brooding Pathetique Symphony, coming at rather pointed moments in the action and illustrating, I suspect, what Script Writer Jules Furthman must originally have hoped to be a fresh approach to the notorious Billy.

The story is more of an incident, involving Billy's meeting with Doc, how Doc turned him over to his own girl friend for nursing, how Billy took her—"Rio"—away from him, then was willing to trade her back—in exchange for his horse, how Doc took up for the Kid, risked Sheriff Thomas Mitchell's guns and how, with Doc in his grave, the boy and girl go off to become legends of the Old West.

"THE OUTLAW." RKO-Radio release produced by Howard Hughes. Screen play by Jules Furthman. Music arranged by Victor Young. Photographed by Gregg Toland. At Keith's.

THE CAST

Rio	Jane Russell
Billy the Kid	Jack Beutel
Pat Garrett	Thomas Mitchell
Doc Holliday	Walter Huston

The hullabaloo over Miss Russell's fondness for low-cut blouses, haystacks and double beds seems to have pushed Producer Hughes into mildly amusing necessities of cutting his scenes. Although the distress has been loud in some quarters and can rightly be ascribed to a question of taste, it should be recorded that many pictures have gloried in scenes just as suggestive without upsetting the production applecart.

Plus a Pome

No doubt there is more behind the criticism heaped on Hughes than the scenes themselves warrant. The ways of the big-time movie world are indeed devious.

One reaction I located by chance—a review of the picture in the current Motion Picture Herald, a publication which never, ever, describes any film as less than "Fair." For the first time in my life, I was amused to find the Herald call this one "Poor."

Before saying goodby to Keith's and Miss Russell, a poem, from the neighborly Anonymous, who writes:

To be symmetrical
Miss Jane Russell
Should
Wear a bustle.

Prince Georges Gets Jarrell As First Recreation Director

Temple R. Jarrell, recreation and group work director for the United Community Services, has been appointed the first director of recreation for Prince Georges County.

He will prepare and coordinate a new recreation program planned by the county. It will start next year. An appropriation of $10,000 has been made for this year to cover planning, while next year some $180,000 will be available for playgrounds and other facilities.

Jarrell, whose appointment was announced yesterday by C. Gerard Buscher, chairman of the county recreation board, will receive $6500 a year.

A native of College Park, Md., and a graduate of the University of Maryland with B. A. and M. A. degrees, he has held various recreation positions with the District Recreation Department, the Panama Canal Zone division of schools, and has directed recreation for employes of the atomic energy project at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Jarrell twice held the Maryland State championship in horseshoe pitching.

Danny Petro Fined $50 In Alexandria Court

Danny Petro, professional boxer of 30 6th st. se., was fined $50 and costs yesterday in Alexandria Civil and Police Court on charges of disorderly conduct, abusive language over the telephone, and destroying property.

Petro was arrested Saturday after Mrs. Evelyn Hitt of 217 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, had charged in a warrant that he abused her over the phone and also kicked in the door of her home. She told police Petro had been keeping company with her daughter, Betty Jane, 19. Petro pleaded innocent to the charges.

Death Calls for Pet Cheetah Not at Zoo, But in Old Home

Death, as it must come to all cheetahs, came over the weekend to Cleo.

But it came only after valiant last-minute efforts by her young owners to save her life.

And Cleo died not at the Zoo—a fairly new home for her—but at her old apartment home at 1650 Harvard st. nw., in her glass-inclosed porch room.

Cleo, 11 months old, was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wayne at the age of 6 weeks in Ethiopia, where Wayne worked for an oil company.

The Waynes came back for him to study at the University of Maryland, bringing Cleo. The three stayed for a while at the apartment of Wayne's mother, Mrs. Wilella Wayne, on Harvard st.

This beat the jungle as far as Cleo was concerned. She roamed the place, even slept on Mrs. Wayne's bed. She was friendly with everyone.

But when the Waynes moved to 5730 Chillum Heights rd., Hyattsville, two months ago they discovered real estate discriminations against cheetahs. Cleo had to go to the zoo.

The Waynes went over every day to keep her from getting homesick. Then Cleo and Dr. William M. Mann, zoo director, began to hit it off. She was getting along well.

Monday the Waynes paid a call on Cleo. The illness came while they were there.

The Waynes bundled Cleo into a blanket and took her to a vet. The doctor diagnosed an intestinal disease, said the cheetah probably would not live through the night.

Cleo was taken back to the apartment she loved. It was too late.

But death came in Cleo's own room.

CLEO, . . . died at home

Boykin to Recommend April 15 For Start of Sesqui Fete

Edward Boykin, director of the Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee, said yesterday he will recommend that the Sesqui officially get under way on April 15, the anniversary of the laying of the first District cornerstone by George Washington in 1791.

Boykin said he was glad to see from a story in Monday's Washington Post that the Daughters of the American Revolution are campaigning to clean up the area at Jones Point, Alexandria, site of the first marker. He added he wants to reenact the ceremony this year.

Boykin also said he is considering asking for a joint session of Congress on that date, to be addressed by President Truman. The first session met in Washington in November, 1800, but Congress is not expected to be in session this November.

However, Boykin added, he wants to reenact that first session in November, using the old Senate chamber and actors in proper costumes of a century and a half ago.

The executive committee will receive on Friday a proposed program for 1950 historical celebrations to mark the city's 150th anniversary as the Nation's Capital.

Expecting complaints from Sesqui foes on Capitol Hill in the next few days over incidents which led to postponement of the Freedom Fair from July 4 until next year, Sesqui officials are turning to this year's program of pageantry exhibits, and celebration with the symphonic drama in the new Rock Creek Park amphitheater as the big event.

From London yesterday came a new complaint about the Freedom Fair. The Times complained about the design of the three main buildings, in the shape of the letters "U S A." The paper said that was "a conceit which will be appreciated in full by those entering the fair by parachute."

Support Payment Sought in Suit

Mrs. Helen Colbert deSibour of 2022 Columbia rd. nw. yesterday asked District Court to award her separate maintenance payments from Henri L. J. deSibour of 1642 Connecticut ave. nw.

She said that they married on January 19, 1947, and parted on December 11, 1949. There are no children and Mrs. deSibour said that her husband is not supporting her sufficiently in view of his income, which she says exceeds $10,000 a year.

Couple Wed 25 Years to Join Separate Religious Orders

San Francisco, Jan. 3 (U.P.).—A 50-year-old State employe and former newspaperman who pondered many years on the shortness of life and the length of eternity will leave his wife this week to become a monk.

Donald D. Foster's wife of 25 years, May, will stay behind to settle their worldly affairs. Then she hopes to enter a convent.

Foster has resigned his job with the State Board of Equalization. He has put up his $30,000 flat and his hobby shop for sale. At the end of the week he plans to begin his year's study at a monastery to become a Benedictine monk.

"We are as one in this decision," Foster said. The Fosters' daughter, Marjorie Jean, pleased them when she became a nun. Foster's sister, Edna, became a Maryknoll contemplative, Sister Daniel Marie, in New York in 1938.

"What kept impressing me was the relative shortness of life, compared with eternity," said Foster.

For years the Fosters discussed their plans with their parish priest, the Rev. William J. Cantwell of St. Monica's Church, and with an old friend, the Rev. Thomas M. Raber, assistant pastor of St. Bruno's Church in San Bruno.

Both priests finally consented to recommend Foster to St. John's Abbey at Collegeville, Minn.

Is There a 'Cure' for Suicide?

Four Reasons Why People Seem to Want to Die

By Juliet Parker Filler

(Copyright, 1950, by United Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Filler is the author of the book, "Female Hormones." She is the wife of a professor of gynecology and obstretics at New York University.

Chapter Three

WHY do people want to die? The answers of the experts vary. There are four motives which they agree are the most common.

1. Economics.
2. Ill health.
3. Domestic difficulties.
4. Prolonged emotional stress.

Life insurance figures point to the economic motive. As already indicated, their graphs reach unhappy heights during depression periods. They are much lower during booms, or during the activities of wartime.

In the 1929 stock market break, for example, a grim joke swept the country about a hotel clerk who asked every guest before he registered: "Do you want this room for sleeping or for leaping?"

Top and Bottom

ACCORDING to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, perhaps the foremost authority on the statistics of suicide, "Suicides predominate at both ends of the social and financial scale."

The millionaire who throws himself out of his twentieth-story penthouse and the day laborer found dead in a gas-filled tenement had basically the same problem. One had lost his wealth. The other had lost his job.

Miss Lona Bonnell, chief counselor of the Save-A-Life-League, which devotes itself entirely to helping would-be suicides, says poverty is the reason most frequently given by the unfortunates the League helps.

The man who feels his family needs his insurance money more than it needs him. The person whose self respect is ground down by joblessness. The widow who can't manage to keep her family together. Many of their cases have the same sad pattern.

Health Chief Cause

THE Police Department of Detroit made a two-year study of suicide motives during the war, when favorable economic conditions prevailed. They discovered that ill health was the chief motive among men, domestic difficulties among women.

A medical examiner in a large Eastern city said most of the suicide notes he reads give the "tired-of-it-all" explanation for the act.

A police captain in the same city made some trenchant observations, looking at me suspiciously when I asked for some information about suicides:

"You can never tell about them," he said, "We hardly ever get a call from a flop house or the Salvation Army. And who could be more down and out than those guys? We don't get calls from cancer hospitals or homes for incurables or the blind, either.

"So, it doesn't seem to matter much whether a person is rich or poor, sick or well. It depend on the person."

Most psychiatrists agree with the police captain. They believe the emotional stress behind a suicide is too complex for a simple, single explanation. They believe that suicide notes seldom give the real reason.

Love Hardly Ever

SIGNIFICANTLY, none of the authorities mentions shattered love affairs as the motive for any appreciable number of actual suicides.

Love is, they agree, the cause of a large percentage of half-hearted suicidal attempts. The spurned one (usually female) takes a small dose of poison or slashes her wrists, in the hope that reconciliation with the loved one—not death—will be the result.

The Detroit study indicated that, among women, of 114 suicides "attempted" because of love, only two were actually successful.

There was one word which occurred again and again in connection with people who prefer death to life. It was the word, "aloneness."

Whether he imagines it or whether it is actually so, the person who tries to die feels alone in the world. He feels that he has no one to whom he can unburden himself.

Time after time, in case histories by psychiatrists, the word occurred, usually heavily embroidered with medical terms. It occurred in the terse reports by doctors who had heard the last words of those who died of self-inflicted wounds. It was in many suicide notes. It was in statements by members of a suicide's family. It was in statements by people who had attempted to die, and failed.

A pathetic mixture f motives, at the core of which is a feeling of aloneness, is illustrated by a case history recounted by Miss Bonnell.

Lonely Boy

A 19-YEAR-OLD boy left his home in a small town in the Middle West. He went to New York to seek his fortune.

His widowed father had begged him not to leave. There had been a bitter quarrel. The boy, with the cockiness of his years, vowed he would never go back home. He was going to "show" his father and the world.

Weeks and months went by. New York was indifferent to his abilities. Furnished rooms, even those with chipped walls and stained furniture, cost money. Even the poorest kind of food consumed his savings.

He would not go home beaten. He turned on the gas, lay down to die.

He didn't die. A neighbor saved him, and he was removed to the hospital, where a field worker from the Save-a-Life-League visited him.

Later, he was released from the hospital in the care of the neighbor who had brought him back to unwilling life, with the promise that, as soon as he felt strong enough, he would come to the offices of the League.

Needed Each Other

HE kept his promise, though still convinced that death was his only solution. After hours of sympathetic listening, Miss Bonnell got his permission to send a telegram to his father. The telegram said nothing of what had happened to the boy. It asked whether the father wanted him back.

Days passed. There was no answer. The boy's face, as he came to the League office for guidance, had once again that secret, clouded look of one who has a rendezvous with death.

Miss Bonnell was confident she would hear from the father. And she did.

The father had been away from home and had just received her telegram. His answer was simple:

"Please send John immediately. Need him desperately."

A prayer of gratitude and a good long cry wiped out the boy's loneliness and sense of not being wanted. Two days later, he was on a bus headed for home.

Since then, letters and pictures from both father and son tell over and over the joy they have found in their mutual need for each other.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

To The Strains of 'My Old Kentucky Home'

Ira E. Long of 4109 N. 3d rd., Arlington, Va., has a topper for my line about running for the Presidency.

"Don't you do it," he warns. "The minute you get mixed up with the Government you'll find yourself buried down at Fort Knox."

WELCOME BACK, GENTS

My, wasn't it quiet around town with Congress away?

IT HAS ITS POINTS

Michael Fontana of 1114 S. Courthouse rd., Arlington, Va., reports that Santa Claus didn't show much favoritism out in his neighborhood.

"Almost all the children got cowboy outfits, complete with six-shooters," Mike reports. "Only one little girl got an Indian outfit.

"You can imagine what she goes through now. Every day she dies a thousand deaths."

But Mike concludes that Santa's lack of imagination isn't so bad at that. He says:

"The girl doesn't mind. At least she has all the boys running after her now."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

E. J. Shafer of 300 Lawrence dr., Falls Church, Va., notes that the 1950 calendars distributed to Government offices were printed by the "Federal Prison Industries, Atlanta, Ga." Muses District Liner Shafer:

"Doesn't it seem ironical that men who are 'doing time' spend their days making calendars? Could it be that this means has been employed to impress prison inmates of the consequences of their misdeeds?"

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I love dogs. I've never seen the dog I couldn't be friends with.

But my neighbor has two dogs that disturb the peace of the entire neighborhood with their constant barking.

I don't want to complain to the police, and when I mention the matter to my neighbor, he blandly asks: "Are you sure they're our dogs?"

What can I do? The situation is desperate.

Name Withheld

Dear Sir:

You can move, complain to the police, or try some crafty strategy.

Every time the dogs start to bark, call up your neighbor and say: "I'm not sure it's your dog; would you please take a look outside and see?"

If the dogs really do annoy the whole neighborhood, other residents of the area will no doubt be glad to join your Peace Plan. A series of phone calls—especially when the barking takes place in the middle of the night—should bring the matter to a head in short order.

I make this drastic suggestion only because you say you love dogs and the situation is desperate.

However, if it's just that you begrudge a dog an occasional yip, try going through a day without uttering a sound yourself, and you'll be more tolerant of the dogs. Bill

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Stephen Rose of 1403 Newton st. ne. reports that the Newton Theater recently advertised: "'The Sun Never Sets' at 5 p. m."

SUGGESTION BOX

The flag at the Veterans' Administration is in disgraceful condition, and should be replaced. If it were taken down at sundown every day, as custom requires, maybe it would last longer.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder how many times "1949" will be xxxed out of the dates lines of my letters before I'll remember that this is 1950?

JUST FOR A CHANGE

President Truman ought to set aside one week each year during which all electric appliance stores would agree not to use the term "famous make" in their advertisements.

HARRIS FOR GOVERNOR

On ballots we can't make a mark
Until we get home rule.
But Oren Harris (Dem. of Ark.),
To suffrage is quite cool.

He says we've made such din and fuss
The bill is pigeonholed.
Democracy is not for us;
He claims we've been too bold.

Oh, Oren, pal—we hate to knock
A man who's made his mark;
But please go back to Little Rock,
And don't run us—run Ark.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Kickback Issue Greets Congress

By Drew Pearson

The hottest problem facing congressional leaders as they got back to Washington was how to prevent another Parnell Thomas kickback scandal.

Martin

This will be a major topic at a secret meeting of the House Republican steering committee early next week. House GOP leader Joe Martin will tell his lieutenants that House Republicans must immediately rid their payrolls of any nonworking employes who draw salaries from the taxpayers.

He also will do some blunt talking about members who bring disgrace upon themselves and their party by accepting kickbacks. Martin himself has set an excellent example in keeping his payroll honest. Since coming to Congress he has never had a relative or a nonworking employe in his office, and last year he refused to hire an extra $3000-a-year clerk authorized by Congress on the ground that the extra clerk wasn't needed.

Speaker Sam Rayburn and Majority Leader John McCormack also will privately warn House Democrats who have been chiseling on the taxpayers to clean up their payrolls pronto.

Photoing the Russians

The Russians have their own way of keeping an eye on American officials in Moscow. Some time ago, Maj. Gen John W. O'Daniel, United States military attache in Moscow, was watching a gala military parade that included a flight by the Red Army's latest planes. He was anxious to know more about these planes, so, leaning halfway out of his office window, he took a series of pictures.

What General O'Daniel didn't know, however, was that across the street Russian cameramen caught him in the act. And the newsreels they took of him taking pictures of Russian planes are to be featured in Soviet theaters as an illustration of so-called American espionage.

Note—Recent United States "spy" trials have shown that the FBI has used the same tactics in watching the Soviet Embassy on 16th st.—namely, placing cameras in a building just across the street.

Congressional Predictions

Privately, leaders agree that the second session of the Eighty-first Congress will set no records for productivity or progressive legislation. It will be a cautious session, with both parties playing politics up to the hilt and striving to keep their skirts clean for the November election.

There will be a lot of shouting about civil rights—with an eye on November—but nothing enacted into law except, possibly, the anti-poll-tax bill.

The fair employment practices bill, hottest of the civil-rights measures, also will pass the House, but Senate foes are prepared to filibuster it to death. Thus, Northern Democrats can boast in the next campaign that they were able to get this hot potato through one House of Congress, while Southern Democrats can boast about killing it in the other.

The Republicans are strictly in the middle on this one and can be counted on to outyell the Democrats in the losing fight for civil-rights legislation. However, they are not willing to revise cloture to back up their yells. Here's the outlook on other major issues:

Federal Aid to Education—Already passed by the Senate, this hot potato will be revamped in the House to meet Catholic objections.

Taxes—The House will pass legislation increasing either corporate income taxes or taxing excess profits, but Senator George of Georgia and other business-minded colleagues will put up a stiff battle against this in the Senate.

Social Security — The Social Security expansion bill, already passed by the House, will pass the Senate in somewhat similar form, with few, if any, of its "liberalization" teeth pulled.

Taft-Hartley repeal — Not a chance, despite White House demands for action. Congressional Democrats want to save this one for an election issue to use against Republicans.

The Brannan farm plan—No chance. Republicans are almost solidly against it and the Democrats are badly split.

Foreign aid—Some form of President Truman's aid-for-backward-nations (or Point 4) program will pass, but look for a backward shift to isolationism on Marshall Plan spending.

Oleo tax repeal — Will pass, though modified to provide that colored oleo sold in hotels and restaurants must be so labeled.

Other issues—The important National Science Foundation bill, to coordinate and expand scientific research, will at long last become law. However, the crystal ball for the second session of the Eighty-first Congress holds little hope for public power and health insurance enthusiasts. Neither the Columbia Valley nor the Missouri Valley "TVA" bills stand a chance of enactment. The Federal health insurance bill, savagely fought by the American Medical Association, is in the same boat.
